THE APPOINTMENT OF CAPT. RYNDERS.—The New York Courier & Enquirer of last Thursday makes these just and forcible remarks upon the administration's appointment of the notorious Capt. Isaiah Rynders as marshal of New York:

The new Administration is rapidly developing its character. The appointment of Isaiah Rynders to the post of U. S. Marshal for this city has been more zealously devoted to the filibusters, and more peculiarly mixed up in their disgraceful and inhuman schemes, than any other man in the country. He was the leading spirit in the great filibuster meeting in the Tabernacle two months ago, at which resolutions were adopted denouncing the interference of the general government against sending recruits and arms to Walker, and defying its authority. He was himself from his labors to bring the neutrality laws into contempt and to frustrate their execution. He now makes the chosen agent of the Administration to carry them into effect and punish those guilty of violating them. The most impudent and responsible marshalship in the whole country is now to be assumed by one who has distinguished himself as a more active partisan of the filibusters, and of their crimes, than all were the laws violated, have never had frequent occasion to challenge in this city. Now, how can this be explained? What is the motive that could have induced the new Administration to commit an act of such gross impropriety? It must be said that there was a necessity of rewarding so serviceable a filibuster of the subterranean division of the party as Isaiah Rynders has proved. This is true, doubtless, of the policy of the established politics; but why was this particular post assigned to him? Are whole cities and states which have done as much for him without any particular inappropriateness be met with this, from which all the subordinate offices will be filled? Is the head of the party to be alone honored?

The fact, fair sawyer is, that the Administration has a filibuster proclivity, and that it has selected the reward with particular reference to the manner in which its recipient could actually employ it. We have not the slightest doubt that Rynders will, as he has already done, use the influence of the laws against the filibusters which he expected when the Administration appointed him. We have no confidence, particularly, in the Attorney, the prosecuting agent of the Administration to carry them into effect and compel their authority. It is stated in a letter to the New York Daily News that the Administration has determined to dispense with Brigham Young as soon as his commission expires.

Albany Statesman.

But why should the Administration suffer Brigham Young to remain in the office he so horribly disgraces until the expiration of his commission? Does the Administration intend to treat all miscreants in office with equal indulgence, or must the old Mormon scoundrel and blackguard be made an object of most especial forbearance?

MEN WITH TAILS.—Robert Walsh, Esq., concludes one of his recent letters from Paris to the New York Journal of Commerce with the following interesting reference to the present state of information upon this subject:

The Count de Castelnau, one of the most celebrated and active travelers and explorers of this age, and personally well known and highly esteemed in the United States, is now engaged in inquiries in Egypt and the adjacent regions. You may remember that some sensation was excited on both sides of the Atlantic by an account first brought from Abyssinia of a candidated race of negroes—men and women with short tails. M. de Castelnau, when in Brazil, sought some testimony on the subject from the imported slaves of different countries and tribes of the East, and received information which inclined him to the affirmative. He recently visited the Red Sea and the adjacent territories, "mainly for the purpose of procuring some evidence respecting the famous Niamniams, or negroes with a caudal appendix." At Suez he had heard much that favored the story, but what he learned in his excursions to the Red Sea amounted to no more than the certainty of an old tradition and a general impression among the blacks of the interior. He is left in doubt whether the case be not entirely mythical or simple hearsay. So the theory of Lord Monboddo is not yet confirmed nor disproved.

Lord Monboddo, our readers may remember, was a learned and able though eccentric Scotchman of the last century, who, among other fantastic speculations, put forth the theory that monkeys are Emphatically men, and men only fully developed monkeys. He also advocated the existence of satyrs and mermaids, and gave the rein to his speculative faculties generally. Mr. Walsh's allusion to him is of course merely playful, as even the discovery of caudated men would leave his whimsical theory where it found it.

☞ A voluminous and very comprehensive report has recently been published by the Railroad Commissioners of New York. Amongst other interesting statistics contained in it are the following: That the dividends paid on the completed roads throughout the State average four to eight per cent. on the aggregate capital stock; that the double track laid is equal to nearly one-fourth of the whole length of the roads, and the siding to one-eighth; that the total number of locomotive engines employed is one hundred and thirty-five, of passenger and baggage cars nine hundred, freight cars seven thousand and five hundred, and persons employed eighteen thousand and twelve; that of the whole number of persons killed eight per cent. were passengers, thirty-one per cent. employees, and sixty-one per cent. neither passengers nor employees; and that four-fifths of the passengers killed and one-third of those injured suffered in consequence of their own imprudence. A comparison of the safety of railroad traveling on the roads of New York and those of Great Britain during the last four years, shows that there were a greater number of passengers killed and a less number injured upon our roads in proportion to the number carried than upon those in Great Britain.

A SLANDER CORRECTED.—The Hon. George Eustis, Jr., of Louisiana, an old Democrat, joined the American party two or three years ago. Some Democratic letter-writers have lately been calumniating him. One of them says, "he has made full confession of his sins, and has again been received into the bosom of his former political mother." There is not one word of truth in the assertion. We have a direct assurance from one of Mr. Eustis's most intimate personal and political friends, that he would not for any consideration desert the party or the principles for which he has so manfully fought. For so young a member of Congress, he has already achieved a great national reputation. His constituents will send him back to Washington almost by acclamation.

☞ Any lady, who thoroughly understands all the English and ornamental branches and music and has good vocal qualifications and can give first-rate testimonials of her ability as a teacher, can hear of a situation, if she would like to go to Texas, and engage to remain there a couple of years. Our Texas friends think that one 25 or 30 years old would be more likely to please than one younger.

A SCREW LOOSE.—The resignation of the Attorney General of Virginia has already been announced. The Richmond Enquirer contains a letter from Lieutenant-Governor E. W. McComas, in which, after vindicating himself from certain slanderous reports, he announces his determination to resign his position. There certainly must be a screw loose somewhere in the Old Dominion.

COMMITTED FOR MURDER.—It will be seen by our report of the police proceedings that James McMullen and Milus West have been committed to prison without the privilege of bail to answer for the murder of George Keller. They will probably be tried at the May term of the Circuit Court.

EXPLOSION OF POWDER IN ST. LOUIS.—Several Lives Lost.—The telegraph has informed us of an explosion of powder in St. Louis last Friday night, the particulars of which we have the details in the Republican of Saturday:

Yesterday afternoon about half past 6 o'clock, the persons in the immediate vicinity of Main and Chestnut streets were startled by an explosion. It came from the building numbered as the premises of No. T. 13. Albright, No. 25 Main street, three doors north of Chestnut. The explosion was so violent in its character that it had scarcely died away before the brick walls on the east and west sides of the building came down with a terrific crash, and the whole building was soon enveloped in flames.

The confusion of the explosion was attended by loss of life and the maiming and burning of several. One man, supposed to be a German, was picked up dead upon the sidewalk immediately in front of the store. Another was taken by the side of Custer, was in the store at the time, making a purchase of a pistol. He was with some difficulty rescued from the burning pile. Another was taken by the side of Custer, who is a large majority in the Legislature, and the city is largely American, the Democracy have managed to obtain the control in a majority of the counties, and this Democratic majority has undertaken to deprive the city of the Representatives which it has chosen and to pass special laws of the most infamous, outrageous, and tyrannous character for its government. Imitating the ruthless tyranny of the Spanish Inquisition under Ignatius Loyola, this Democratic Legislature has assumed to itself the power to disfranchise, to imprison, and to murder all who do not make a confession of Democratic faith, and has provided for the appointment of unscrupulous partisans to execute the decrees of its despotic tribunal. The agents of the terrible Inquisition in the days of its greatest power, or of the Star Chamber of France, armed with the lettre de cachet which gave that instrument of absolute and fearful despotism was allowed, were never clothed with such absolute and terrible power as, by this infamous election bill, are conferred upon the agents of an unscrupulous Democratic Executive to carry out the purposes of the ruthless, reckless, rule-or-ruin Democratic party of Louisiana.

We are not familiar with the provisions of the charter of the city of New Orleans, but we cannot suppose that the provisions of this election bill are consistent with the chartered privileges of the people of that city. Their municipal charter is null and of no effect, it is a dead letter upon the statute book, if the State Legislature is permitted, in its arbitrary discretion, to remove from office those who have been elected by the popular vote of the city and to put in their places, against the wishes and the earnest protestations of the citizens, pliant tools of the dominant political party in the State.

The object of the Louisiana Democracy is to take away from the people the right of suffrage whenever its opponents have the majority, and to centralize all power and patronage in the Democratic Executive of the State. They have outraged all propriety, all sense of justice and equality, by taking away from the people of New Orleans the election of their own constables and authorizing their appointment by the Governor. The next move in this shocking drama of political despotism will perhaps be the arbitrary confiscation of the property of prominent American citizens of the State, and its division among those of the Democratic partisans who have been most zealous in the execution of the decrees of this tyrannical Democratic tribunal and most active in hunting down its political opponents.

Honest Democrats throughout the land will stand aghast at this infamous usurpation of despotic power in the name of Democracy in Louisiana. They will begin to see to what extremes of cruelty, injustice, and hellish tyranny the insanity of Democratic partisanship tends to lead them, and they will shrink with horror and with loathing from the foul thing that, in the once sacred name of Democracy, seeks to perpetrate such heinous outrages and wrest from a free-born people their dearest privileges and to build up in their midst an execrable despotism of which they may themselves one day become the miserable victims.

POOR FELLOWS.—The mission to Berlin is said to have been offered by Mr. Buchanan to Mr. Jas. B. Clay of Kentucky and declined by him; it is said to have been subsequently offered to Mr. Pratt of Maryland, but not accepted. It is also reported in Democratic circles that those tenders of this mission to such nondescript politicians, known as "Old-line-Whig-Buchanan men," were made with the distinct previsions understanding that they were to be declined. When Mr. Buchanan assumed the Presidential chair, the policy of dispensing the offices exclusively among the Democrats had already been determined upon, but this new "bargain and corruption" scheme has doubtless been concocted by the wily brain, fertile in such expedients, for the purpose of propitiating the quondam Whigs who had forgotten their whiggery in the foul embraces of the wanton Democracy whom they once delighted in hating.

If it is true that this Berlin mission is thus hawked about from one Old-line-Whig Democrat to another with the express understanding that it is to be declined merely as a ruse to blind the poor fellows who have abandoned their principles and gone over to the enemy to be on the winning side, it is indeed a sad and humiliating spectacle for the nation, and more disgraceful to the Administration that resorts to such petty meanness to retain favor with one of its factions than to the men who lend themselves to such an arrangement to prop up the Administration.

☞ It is supposed that the Tehuantepec route, through Mexico, will be able to command nearly the whole California travel next season. N. Orleans will control the route. According to information from Washington there is no doubt that the Postmaster-General will contract with the company for the transportation of the United States mails.

The Company is in the market at New Orleans for a loan.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 1, 1857.

DEMOCRATIC DESPOTISM IN LOUISIANA.—The ruinous and reckless course of the Democratic party has never been more signally exemplified than in the late action of the Louisiana Legislature in regard to the New Orleans election law. As partisans, we could congratulate the Americans of that State upon the adoption, by their opponents, of a measure, the consequences of which cannot fail to enrich the Democratic party in Louisiana; but, as good citizens, we sincerely deplore this ruthless attack upon the constitutional rights of free-born Americans.

The Governor and Legislature of Louisiana have enacted a most infamous election bill, designed not to secure justice and popular right, but to overawe the independent voters of New Orleans, who have determined to submit no longer to be ostracised by the horde of foreign ruffians, by whom, until the organization of the American party, all the elections in that city were completely controlled. What will the American nation think of the policy of appointing armed minions of any political party, clothing them with despotic powers, and turning them loose on election day to browbeat and drive off from the polls by violence the legal voters of the opposing party? This has been done by the ultra Democratic Governor and Legislature of Louisiana, and a similar attempt would probably be made by our Kentucky Democracy, if they had the power, to tyrannize over the gallant Americans of Louisville.

A brief summary of this bill may be interesting to our readers. Instead of voting in precincts, according to the proximity of the voter, the Democratic wiseacres of the Louisiana Legislature have decreed that voters shall cast their votes in such precincts in each ward as may be designated by the alphabetical commencement of their names, so that Mr. Jones, residing in one extreme of a ward, cannot vote there, but must go to the other end, where Mr. Smith may be similarly situated. A superintendent of elections, with a salary of $3,000 per annum, and four assistants, with salaries of $1,000 each, are to be appointed by the Governor. These partisan appointees of an intensely Democratic Executive are clothed with absolute control over the citizens of New Orleans on election day. They can make arrests of any persons whom they may consider offenders and detain them in prison until the election is over. If resisted, they have power to call out the whole militia of the State as a special police, each person so serving being entitled to $10 a day, and any person refusing to serve being subjected to a fine of $500, and, in default of payment, to be confined sixty days in the parish prison, &c. All the excesses of this monstrous usurpation of power are to be saddled upon the citizens of New Orleans against their consent.

Does any one doubt what would be the result, if an attempt should be made to enforce this law? Armed with legal authority, the myrmidons of Gov. Wickliffe would either imprison or drive from the polls the mass of their opponents, and the superintendents would be nothing but miserable tools of their party. But, thank heaven! the people of Louisiana have inherited some of the virtues of our revolutionary fathers, and they are not yet quite prepared to submit to any dictators who may wish to make slaves of them. This law can never be enforced until the last American has been cut down in defence of his rights, and we are inclined to think that Gov. Wickliffe will have his hands full, when he seeks to enforce such tyranny over his political opponents. Not one of the Democratic papers, except the Courier, was in favor of this bill, and honest Democrats are loud and earnest in their condemnation of it.

If, as some of the Democracy say, the Americans of New Orleans have used violence and allowed ruffians to control their councils, all of which is strenuously denied, the panacea which the Democratic Governor and Legislature seek to employ can result only in far more vindictive feelings and more serious collisions. In its practical operation one party or the other must be annihilated. The tendency of the modern Democracy is decidedly toward absolute despotism. They are prompt to take advantage of any official defects which exist in the constitution of a State to exercise their power for the promotion of party success. The constitution of Louisiana is radically defective in some particulars.

It has been construed by the Democratic party that now controls the State to give to the Legislature arbitrary power to remove any officer elected by the people and to appoint another in his place. The Democratic party has already, upon several occasions, availed itself of this construction of the constitutional power of the Legislature to remove from office, for no other cause than that of their being members of the American party, State and municipal officers elected by the people, and to put in their places violent Democratic partisans who were peculiarly obnoxious to the people that were thus summarily and tyrannically disfranchised. An American has fully elected sheriff of New Orleans by a majority of the popular votes of the voters of that city was thus ousted from his office and a Democrat placed therein by this usurpation of arbitrary power. The American Representatives of the city of New Orleans, although they held legal certificates of election to the State Legislature, were summarily deprived of their seats by the exercise of this infamous tyranny, and pliant tools of the Democratic party were foisted upon the people of New Orleans as their Representatives. Although the city of New Orleans comprises about one-half of the whole population of the State, the counties have a large majority in the Legislature, and the city is largely American, the Democracy have managed to obtain the control in a majority of the counties, and this Democratic majority has undertaken to deprive the city of the Representatives which it has chosen and to pass special laws of the most infamous, outrageous, and tyrannous character for its government. Imitating the ruthless tyranny of the Spanish Inquisition under Ignatius Loyola, this Democratic Legislature has assumed to itself the power to disfranchise, to imprison, and to murder all who do not make a confession of Democratic faith, and has provided for the appointment of unscrupulous partisans to execute the decrees of its despotic tribunal. The Company is in the market at New Orleans for a loan.

THE DALLAS-CLARENDON TREATY AGAIN.—The statements and contradictions respecting this treaty seem to be endless. The National Intelligencer, habitually wary in such matters, republished the other day from the New York Tribune what purported to be a correct copy of the treaty as amended by the Senate, and we supposed that at last we had obtained an authentic statement of the case as it is. Scarcely, however, had this supposed draft of the amended treaty appeared in the columns of the Intelligencer, when the Washington correspondent of the New York Express announced upon "direct authority" that it was all a mistake, inasmuch as the treaty bearing the sanction of the Executive, and already on its way to England, was not only different in form from the treaty as amended by the Senate, but radically different in substance, and intimated, furthermore, that the draft in the Intelligencer wasn't even a copy of the treaty as it came from the Senate. And now the Washington correspondent of the New York Times declares with equal confidence that the Executive made no alterations whatever in the treaty, but simply dispatched it to England in the shape imposed upon it by the Senate.

Amidst those conflicting assertions, it is impossible to say what is the fact, or even to guess at with any reasonable chance of guessing it. In this state of uncertainty it is of course perfectly idle to speculate on the probability of England's acceptance or non-acceptance of the treaty. Its fate is necessarily as unknown as its provisions.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.—Two young persons, Albert Wood and a girl named Shaw, have been living not the house of Wm. Clark, near Auburn, N. Y., for a year past. A few days since Wood entered the room where Mrs. Clark and Miss Shaw were sitting. He had a pistol in his hand, and commenced loading it. He tried a ball and found it too small; Miss Shaw volunteered to procure a "patch" for it. She did so. The "patch" was not large enough and she procured another, and then the pistol was loaded.

Wood then said, "What shall I shoot?" Some one said, "Shoot into the wood-box." He replied, "I won't do that." Mrs. Clark exclaimed, "Don't fire in the house. If you are going to shoot, go out of doors and do it." At this moment Miss Shaw cried out, "If you want to shoot, shoot me, and shoot me so that I won't look more than once!"

He turned towards her, deliberately, and placed the muzzle of the pistol against her breast and fired! The ball entered her body just below the heart, and she fell to the floor with a shriek.

Wood then immediately shot himself and fell dead. There is no explanation of this double tragedy, but it is the presumption that it was the result of a mutual determination on the part of both the actors in it.

ARABIAN STEEDS.—There is a touch of poetry and romance in the caption of our paragraph. The idea of far and wide-spreading deserts—of Bedouin tribes—of tent life—of homes upon horseback—of all the concomitants of the Orient, and the prophet—all these are mingled in any allusion to the fast friend of the Arab—his horse.

But we design being practical and prosaic. Yesterday at Mr. Heinsohn's stables we visited the stud of Mr. Keene Richards, of this State, who has imported, in order to improve our stock, seven of the finest blooded animals that can be purchased in the East. It is the purpose of Mr. R. to try effectually this experiment, and he desires that Kentucky shall be the first recipient of any benefit that may accrue therefrom.

These beautiful animals have but recently arrived from Syria, and are to be conveyed to the residence of Mr. R., in Georgetown, Scott county.

THE NEW YORK APPOINTMENTS.—There is no denying that some of the Administration's New York appointments are infamous. They are such as no honest Administration could have made. The New York Day-Book, an accredited organ of the Pierce Administration in New York city, thus speaks of them:

These appointments are not so bad as they might have been, though wherein they could have been more ill-assorted is difficult to point out. Isaiah Rynders is not as bad as Alexander Herrick, and Isaiah Rynders is not as bad as Archibald Watson; but Mr. Pierce will find, before he has had we understand was at work in this thing, did not hanker after so low an appointment have only to say the word. Mr. Buchanan could not have done so enough in this matter to have done worse.

What sort of appointments must those be, which even a prominent Democratic organ feels constrained to speak of in such terms as these!

☞ A shooting affair occurred on board the steamer St. Lawrence on Friday, when some distance below St. Louis. It appears that a passenger named Wm. F. Clark, of New York city, while at the upper table, said to a fellow passenger "that the boys on the boat were d——d saucy." This was overheard by the second steward, Nolen, who asked Clark "what he said," and the expression was repeated, whereupon the steward assaulted Clark, who was in his chair at the table, and struck him several blows in the face with his fist, and retreated towards the pantry, and while retreating was fired upon by Clark, who drew a revolver, three barrels of which took effect. Clark was committed to jail in St. Louis. The steward had several wounds, none, however, of which are considered dangerous.

SPRING EXPEDITION TO LIBERIA.—The American Colonization Society gives notice, through the Rev. W. McLain, its financial secretary, that the ship Mary Caroline Stevens will sail from Baltimore the 1st and from Norfolk the 5th of May next, and will touch at all the ports in Liberia. Application for freight and cabin and steerage passage should be made immediately to the Colonization office. It is not designed to take in any freight at Norfolk, the ship will only touch there for passengers and their luggage. The ship is now on her return voyage to Baltimore, and may be looked for almost daily.

☞ A correspondent, under the signature of "Veritas," sends us a communication against Free Masonry and all secret societies. He seems to think, that if he cannot get his communication published, the only reason must be that the press of the country is not free but muzzled. We can assure him that the simple reason why we reject a great many communications sent to us is that we can fill our paper with articles, in our opinion, more interesting, more just in their views, and more calculated to do good. Would our press be free if we were compelled to publish whatever any one chose to send us, whether we liked it or not?

CHILD BURNED TO DEATH.—The Evansville Journal contains an account of the destruction of the house of Rev. Mr. Martin, at Petersburg, Ind. The family had scarcely time to escape from the building in their night clothes. Everything the house contained was consumed by the ravaging element. A little daughter, only six years of age, was taken from her bed in the bewilderment of half awakened slumbers, and carried from the house, and left for a moment in the scene of confusion to herself, and by some strange infatuation or distruction of her infantile faculties, she rushed back into the flames, and perished amid the falling timbers of the building.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—We have on hand a very large number of communications, many of them well written upon interesting subjects, but we are unable to find room for them as fast as they are received.

We wish to impress upon correspondents the necessity of condensing as much as possible what they have to say. If they occupy too much space in communications to be published, they should write only upon subjects of some importance, and then write as briefly as they can and do justice to the subject, and invariably upon only one side of the paper.

☞ It is said that the Delaware Indians are by far the richest community in the world. They numerically number 1,000 souls, men, women, and children; and, supposing a family to consist of five persons, the average wealth of the families is $22,220. We presume there is a due proportion of nice young squaws among them, and we mention the subject that our fortune-hunters may know where to direct their interesting attentions.

☞ We are told, that, in the political campaign in Mississippi, in which Gov. Poindexter stumped the State under the Palmetto flag as the advocate of South Carolina nullification, Mr. Robt J. Walker took the flag of the Union as his standard, wore it around his waist, and, in that costume, denounced disunion as treason in every important town and village. For that we accord much honor to him.

In Winchester Center, Ct., there has not been a death in one and a half years, and but two or three deaths in three years. The village is surrounded by 200 smoking coalpits, and besides there is no physician.

Albany Statesman.

We do not see what need there could possibly be for doctors where there is so much smoke to cure the folks.

Obtaining no aid from us, the Mexican government must resemble to piece out for itself. We can assure him of the end of a movement which must result in the exhaustion of all other efforts made by the American republics. Governments which have no self-sustaining power must always go to ruin at last.—New York Herald.

Then what is the use of attempting to prop them up by external aid?

☞ Capt. Rynders says that Mr. Buchanan's administration will certainly be popular. He is no prophet, though his name is Isaiah.

☞ The people of Barren county have subscribed one hundred thousand dollars to construct a railroad from Glasgow to the Louisville and Nashville road.

REAL ESTATE AGENCY AT KEOKUK.—Mr. Thos. B. Walker, late of this city, has opened an office in Keokuk, to transact a general agency business. He will attend to the sale of lands, collections, &c. Mr. Walker is very well known here, and, therefore, needs no recommendation from us to our citizens.

☞ The extraordinary and very revolting policy of the administration in respect to its own party is thus spoken of by the Washington correspondent of the New York Times:

WASHINGTON, March 21, 1857.

The agony is over. The Democracy have pillaged their own camp. Democratic heads have fallen into Democratic baskets. New York has at last been settled, and much to the discomfort of anxious seekers on Providence, who have kept up a commotion at Willard's for weeks, and rejoiced over anticipations doomed to be disappointed. The administration has distinctly made itself a party to the internal strifes for plunder a faction, and that feeding the one of acknowledged weakness. There is an unmistakable disaffiance, too, in the fact of deliberate disparagement of the sterling Administration, and of the manifest preference of Mr. Buchanan and his friends over those of Gov. Marcy.

THE CHINESE WAR IN THE BRITISH HOUSE OF COMMONS.—Our readers are aware that Lord Palmerston has declined to treat the passage of Mr. Cobden's resolutions in the House of Commons as an unqualified act of censure upon the Government, and, instead of resigning his office, as such an act of censure would consecutively have rendered decorous and proper, has determined rather to refer the question to the people at the earliest suitable period. His lordship, in short, has resolved to appeal from the somewhat vague and unsatisfactory decision of the House to the direct and plain judgment of the country. In this we think he displays the unfailing sagacity and ready pluck that so habitually constitute his chief hold on the British people. The step is unmistakably Palmerstonian.

Of course it promises to be successful. It would not be Palmerstonian if it didn't. A brief glance at the grounds of this expectation will not only vindicate the propriety of his lordship's course, but show that the vote on Mr. Cobden's resolutions was really a matter of very little significance. The customary resignation of a British Ministry upon an adverse vote in the House of Commons rests upon the assumption that a vote of this sort implies a want of confidence on the part of the people, and that accordingly any further continuance in office would be factious and clearly detrimental to the harmony and welfare of the public councils. When, however, this assumption is effectually canceled by the circumstances of the vote, it manifestly loses its virtue as an act of deliberate public condemnation, and leaves the Ministry at liberty to properly resign or not at their discretion. Such cases, though rare, are not extraordinary, and the present is unquestionably one of them.

It was obvious at the opening of Parliament that the diverse and essentially antagonistic sections of the opposition would coalesce at my moment on almost any question for the sake of compassing the defeat of Palmerston. The first and most critical trial was made on the question of the budget, and resulted in the complete and decisive triumph of the Ministry in both houses. With this emphatic endorsement of the general policy of the Government the opposition should have been content, and doubtless would have been if, like instead of private motives had controlled [illegible]. To the overthrow of Palmerston was [illegible] object to be relinquished [illegible]. This was made on the [illegible] with the equivocal [illegible] mentioned. In the House of Lords, a scene of noble, the triumph of the Ministry, even on this question, was clear and decided, and their partial defeat in the House of Commons was produced only by sheer factious party art, since no candid person can read Mr. Cobden's resolutions without feeling that they were framed with exclusive reference to the combination of all shades of the opposition in what might haply have the air and effect of a condemnation of the Government. The language of the resolutions is itself enough to show that a majority of the House of Commons could not be brought to a direct and explicit censure of the Ministry. It evades the main point in the case, lightly and adroitly touching upon the less important ones, so that members entertaining perfect confidence in the Government might have consistently voted for the resolutions, and many such in fact did. It was plainly a trap set to catch the whole range of the opposition. And when we remember what it actually caught—when we consider that the strong common sense of Cobden, the point and brilliancy of Bulwer, the fancy of Disraeli, and the eloquence of Gladstone, seconded by a host of other experienced and skillful debaters, together with the reflex splendor of Derby and Lyndhurst in the House of Lords, were all able to lure or drive only a bare majority into the spacious and specious snare—the moral force of the thing clearly dwindles into less than nothing. Beside all this, it is morally certain from the complexion of the opposition that neither any of its sections nor all of them combined could at present form a Cabinet capable of carrying on the Government for a single month. This is universally conceded by the press of England.

The course upon which Palmerston has resolved, therefore, is not only proper in itself, but the most discreet and prudent for the country. There can be little doubt from the peculiar circumstances to which we have alluded, and especially from the numerous warm assurances of confidence and support which are pouring in upon the venerable and gallant Minister from all quarters of the kingdom, that the verdict of the people at the general election will be largely in his favor. He certainly deserves such a verdict. The question of the Chinese difficulty, upon which alone it is sought to coalesce him, is beyond all doubt as righteous and necessary a dispute as England has been concerned in for the last century. The strictures of the opposition are mere claptrap and unsoundness. No English Minister would have thought or dreamed of doing less in the matter than Palmerston has done, and none, not even Derby or Disraeli himself, would now dare to reverse or materially modify the action of the Government. The world may rest assured that the long-spun philosophy and rose-colored ethics of the opposition in Parliament will never be heard of again after the close of the impending campaign. They are designed merely for the occasion, and will pass away with it.

THE VARIETIES.

M. Babinet, of the French Institute, in the course of some remarks which he has published concerning the comet which is expected by astronomers in the year 1858, says: "What is more to the point are questions to which the comet has given rise. I must protest against the idea that a comet possesses the power of imparting a perceptible mechanical shock. I can prove that the collision of a swallow, intent on suicide, and flying with full force against a train of a hundred carriages, drawn by ten steam-engines, would be a thousand times more dangerous for the train in question than would be the simultaneous shock of all the known comets against the earth. What is a comet? It is a visible nothing."

WEEKLY JOURNAL.

FRIDAY, APRIL 3, 1857.

ROMAN CATHOLIC MALIGNITY. — Some Roman Catholic of this city writes thus to the Roman Catholic organ in St. Louis in regard to Miss Miller, the young girl who recently ran away from the Roman Catholic Female Seminary near Bardstown:

LOUISVILLE, March 30, '57.

DEAR FRIEND: Your short note has just come to hand and in reference with regard I send you an account of the "Nazareth affair," published in the Bardstown Gazette. You can judge for yourself as to the character of the man. I have been a gentleman of reliable mark. He lives at Mt. Washington, that she is anything but a sober young lady. She has now been living with Mr. Hall for a fortnight or the pleas, for about one month or more and he knows nothing to get her off his hands, but no one has yet arrived who claims any knowledge of her. Moreover Mr. Hall himself has seen his error in so readily rescuing so lost a case. In the case, for he still and even all how his daughter associate with her; and the girls of the village shun her. This gentleman also states that she seems to be very intimate with the stage drivers who stop at this tavern.

Of course we know far too little of Miss Miller to be able to vouch for her character and standing, but we are authorized to give a direct contradiction to the statement of this Louisville letter-writer. We saw Mr. Hall and talked with him yesterday, and he assures us, that, far from seeing the error of what he has done, he believes he judged rightly and acted rightly. As for not allowing his daughter to associate with Miss Miller, he says the only daughter he has is a child only three years old, and, that his reason, who is a young lady, and all the members of his family have associated freely with Miss M. and see no reason why they should not. His utterly denies the allegation that the girls of the village have shunned her, and says that nothing even verging upon impropriety has been observable in her conduct at his house. He brought her to this city on Wednesday evening, and she has gone to an uncle in Lafayette, Indiana, the only Protestant relative she has.

It is no painful as it is revolting to see with what ferocity the myrmidons of the Roman Catholic Church assail the characters of all who presume to call in question them. The days of the Inquisition have long gone by, the no longer dare to break bodies upon the wheel, but they make ample amends to the vengeful spirit of their church by breaking characters upon any horrid instrument of torture they can invent. Even helpless young girls are pursued and caught and torn by their bloodhounds as remorselessly as strong and defiant men. No considerations of justice or truth or humanity or mercy or pity are allowed to come in for one moment between them and their cold, calculating, and fiendlike vengeance.

The creatures of the Roman Church no doubt suppose, that, by blasting at all hazards the character of every young girl who ventures to say a word unfavorable to them or their schools, they will effectually deter other young girls from exposing themselves to the same fate; and unquestionably they are right in their supposition. It may be a long time before another inmate of a Roman Catholic female seminary, no matter what the abuses to which she may be subjected, will dare to make her escape and publish the story of her wrongs. For young girls would not rather keep their lips closed in the presence of the deepest outrages than expose themselves to the fearful risk, the almost certain risk, of having their "life's life lied away" by charges or insinuations of unchasteness and other degrading crimes.

We repeat that we know nothing more of the character of Miss Miller, who has the appearance of a modest young girl, than that Mr. Hall utterly denies the statement of the Louisville letter-writer and bears cordial witness to the entire rectitude of her deportment during her whole sojourn under his roof. With us her character is not an issue, and we should scorn under any circumstances to inquire into it except for purposes of vindication. We think, that, if statements derogatory to any Protestant Female Seminary in the world were made by a young girl educated in it, the Superintendent or the teachers or their friends would be content to attempt to disprove her erroneous statements by certificates given under the hands of their other pupils without waging a war of annihilation against the character of the young offender. Surely old ladies fit to have charge of the mental and moral culture of young girls would feel a keen and exquisite pain in being forced even to contradict publicly the statement of a young orphan-girl committed to their charge, and could be tempted by no earthly consideration to endeavor to ruin her reputation and her hopes forever.

THE COUNCIL-NOT EXPOUNDED.—Considerable astonishment has been expressed in certain quarters at Senator Toombs's warm advocacy of the Minnesota Land Grant bill at the last session of Congress. The Senator's anti-Northern feelings are so violent and so publicly and incessantly proclaimed that his hot espousal of an exclusively Northern measure excited very general surprise. It seemed to some an inexplicable freak. A Chicago Journal, however, thus plausibly accounts for it:

The explanation becomes easy when we are told as we have been, that he has invested money in Minnesota lands, and has other pecuniary interests around Lake Superior. It is not at all impossible that Mr. Toombs may some day become a citizen of the Northwest, and then farewell to his championship of the peculiar institution. He will find other interests more strong and peculiar, one of which may be a desire to represent Northwestern freemen in Congress. Such an event does not seem very probable, neither would it be very surprising, considering the extraordinary changes that are now taking place in our political and social relations.

And, the writer might have added, considering the extraordinary changeableness of the Georgia Senator himself. Indeed, we think the metamorphosis in question would be the most natural thing in the world. The Pressoldiers charge Senator Toombs with having boasted that he would one day call the roll of his slaves on Bunker Hill: but, if he should ever become a citizen of the North, he would be far more likely to resist the death-warrant of slavery itself from that celebrated eminence. The Senator is not more than his people, but he has no constancy of intellect whatever. His "convictions" are entirely sympathetic. The "native hue" of his mind is nothing but the reflection of his surroundings. He couldn't possibly throw a politic. I converset high enough to amaze us.

☞ The Washington correspondent of the New York Journal of Commerce, referring to the probable consequence of a war between Spain and Mexico, says:

Moreover, that would be a case of regular war, to the knowledge of nations, between Spain and Mexico, in that war, shall, with the sanction of either regulars or volunteers of the United States, have repulsed Spain, as she undoubtedly will, is it not a matter of course that the Spaniards will be followed across the narrow strait which separates Mexico from Cuba? I do not see how it can be otherwise, and in this event the whole subject of the question of Cuba, as well as that of Mexico, to say nothing of another domestic question, larger than half a dozen Kansases.

This is the view of one of the most temperate and conservative Democrats in the whole country. It strongly confirms our own opinion, and is no doubt perfectly authentic. Mr. Buchanan unquestionably looks exclusively to the difficulty between Spain and Mexico for a "solution of the question of Cuba;" but, if we are not greatly mistaken, Spain is far too shrewd to come to his relief in any such way. She has never seriously thought of it.

☞ A body of deserters from Walker's army in Nicaragua have published in the Costa Rican Album Semanal a long address to the soldiers remaining with Walker, urging them likewise to desert the General. These men have doubtless suffered many and great privations, but this address is no sufficient apology for their conduct, which is neither brave nor magnanimous. They went to Nicaragua to participate in the revolution, and to sustain the government established by Walker and his coadjutors. If Walker is the thankless, unfeeling, cruel, and unjust one leader that they represent him to be, he could easily have been deposed from his command and a more able and humane leader could be chosen. The address is a poor attempt to justify their desertion of a cause made desperate as much through the vicious habits of the soldiery as the inefficiency of the commander.

☞ We find the following in a recent letter from Havana to the New York Times:

Buchanan's message has not disappointed the haters of Democratic rule for whom, likewise, it was prepared. From the very beginning that it would never consider the claims of the General Assembly. As far as I think it concerns Mr. Buchanan might as well entirely himself of one thing. Such days are past and by. It is the "Pilgrim" of yesterday, from the trumpet pressed now to the blast and whirlwind presently. All expect to make a fortune in Cuba. Even the most liberal premium for $4,000 already known, and to-morrow, no small amount, when we consider that nearly the whole of this amount is divided among the subalterns and that hereby only hopes of continuing in office are raised to that sum.

Mr. Buchanan no doubt has long since thoroughly satisfied himself of this "one thing." It doesn't conflict with his settled intentions in the least.

☞ The time of the Kenton Circuit Court has been occupied the present week in hearing arguments in the case of the Kentucky Trust Co. Bank vs. The Savings Bank of Cincinnati. The question that has been argued so far, is, whether a mortgage made by B. F. Sanford in favor of the Savings Bank for $151,000, should be set aside, having been made without consideration, and at a time when he was otherwise greatly indebted, and, in fact, to himself, it being at once period a stockholder in the Savings Bank. The mortgage was made upon the day of the failure of the Bank.

☞ On Saturday night another tragedy was enacted in the lower portion of Philadelphia,—the participants being of a notoriously bad character. The victim was a rowdy and thief named Wm. Kelley, alias "York Bill," who has figured quite extensively as a ballot-box stuffer in the contested election case, the perpetrator, a United States marine, and the cause an infamous woman, the mistress of the one and the wife of the other.

The wife of Kiley, the marine, had cruelly deserted him a year before, at the instance of Kelley. Hence the murder.

☞ We hoped that Mr. Buchanan could find whites enough in his party to fill all the offices in his gift, but it seems he has appointed Eli S. Parker, an Indian superintendent of the government buildings at Galena. Since he doesn't think the whites of his own party so good as Indians, we are a little afraid he doesn't consider Know Nothings more than about half so good as niggers.

FROM FLORIDA.—We have in the Tampa Peninsular the partial share of several skirmishes between the United States troops and the Indians. Lieutenant Powell had his right arm broken and his nose skinned by a ball. Four of his men were killed, five were wounded, and four were missing. Gen. Harney was about taking the field in person, with a formidable force.

THE MEETING OF THE AMERICAN [illegible] that the new appointees to the [illegible] of Kansas is "a failure." Hall yesterday. An unusually large number of delegates are in attendance. Every Congressional District and nearly every county in the state is represented.

Among the distinguished citizens present in this body we notice the excellent President, Hon. Thos. H. Clay, of Fayette, Hon. Humphrey Marshall, of Henry, Hon. Garrett Davis, of Bourbon, W. C. Anderson, Esq., of Boyle, Hon. A. K. Marshall, of Woodford, Roger W. Hanson, of Fayette, Maj. E. B. Bartlett, of Covington, Col. Thos. L. Jones, of Newport, and a number of others of the most prominent Americans in the State.

The assemblage is remarkable for the intelligence and ability which it comprises. A more intellectual body has never been congregated on the soil of Kentucky, and all are animated with high purposes, scorning the artifices of mere party success, and seeking the general welfare of the State and of the nation.

The Council was engaged in receiving reports of committees, electing delegates to the National Council, and organizing business committees. The nomination of a candidate for State Treasurer will be made to-day, and the reports of the committees on organization and resolutions will also be made.

This is one of the most interesting sessions of the State Council that has ever been held. The party will be completely reorganized and greatly strengthened and encouraged by its action, and the delegates will return to their homes eager for the approaching contest, and confident of a triumphant victory.

☞ Memphis congratulates herself, as well she may, that the last bar of iron has been laid upon the Memphis and Charleston railroad. From this time the world may travel from Memphis to Charleston, Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Boston, and nearly all the other principal cities of the Union by railroad without interruption, and our great regret is, that, to do so, they must avoid Louisville altogether. This should not be. How long will it be? This is a question of vast moment to her people, and it awaits their decision.

As for Memphis, if she will now go vigorously forward and push her Little Rock railroad to a speedy completion, she will have taken a bond of destiny for her future greatness. Without that great work, she can never be much more than half of what she should be.

HIGHLY CREDITABLE.—It appears that on Wednesday, the 1st of April, a figure made to look like a man was laid across the track of the Frankfort railroad before the several trains, and that the conductors stopped their respective trains on approaching it. The Democrat thinks that "the whole affair is highly creditable to the officers of the company as it exhibits their solicitude for the safety of human life." It must, to be sure, be most astonishingly creditable to a railroad conductor's wonderful solicitude for human life that he takes the trouble to stop the train when he thinks he sees a man across the track instead of driving right ahead at full speed. Should such a conductor have a public dinner for his unequalled humanity?

THE REMORED TREATY BETWEEN RUSSIA AND PERSIA.—Lord Palmerston recently made the following declaration in the House of Commons upon this subject:

I have the satisfaction of stating to the House, on the authority of the Russian Minister at this Court, and on that of the Russian Minister for Foreign Affairs, that there is no foundation for the report that such a treaty is in existence. To use the words of the Russian Minister at this Court, "It is an entire fable."

Both the Russian Ambassador in Paris and the Persian Envoy positively assert the same thing. The world, we suppose, will have to accept it, until otherwise assured.

CASS, HUELSMANN, AND A NEGRO GIRL.—Our new and venerable Secretary of State has commenced his diplomatic difficulties with a correspondence with the Chevalier Huelsmann. The Chevalier had some dispute with the master of a negro woman that he had hired as a servant, and the master meeting her in the street told her to go home to his house. The woman did so, and the Chevalier has invoked the interposition of the State Department to defend his right as Minister Plenipotentiary of Austria against interference with his servants. In the correspondence with Secretary Cass, the nature of the patriarchal institution is a subject of discussion.

☞ The intelligence from the British West Indies is interesting. In Jamaica, the agitation against the Cuban slave-trade is kept up vigorously, and public meetings had been held to petition the home government to interfere in the matter. In Barbadoes, the legislature had favorably entertained a project for a telegraph through the Lesser Antilles, connecting the North and South American continents, and had declared its readiness to guarantee the necessary privileges and its share of a general contribution toward the enterprise.

Nor in foreign affairs can we always recognize a statesman, in our very lively Premier; he is too much inclined to the slap-dash school, in his dealings with minor powers. However, we did not mean to pass this Jubilee night under review; we only wished to say that but for general younger relief of her Crown is unequalled, and furthermore that this very quality is the one least seldom found, and the one most needed in this period of our country's history.—Athlon.

The editor of the Athlon is a very accomplished scholar, but he not unfrequently says what he evidently doesn't mean.

The latest English advices indicate that probably Parliament will not be dissolved until the middle of May, as the necessary machinery of the Government must be lubricated by the usual expenditures. It is also expected that Lord Palmerston will probably assume a cold attitude and appeal from the House to the country.—Chicago Journal.

The writer of this paragraph clearly hasn't the remotest idea that a dissolution of Parliament, and an appeal from the House to the country, are one and the same thing.

☞ Mr. Walsh, in his last letter from Paris, remarks:

It is a common impression here, that Congress are improvident in declining to undertake without further delay, a Pacific Railway.

We can easily believe it. To impartial observers abroad, the absorption of our Government by the petty concerns of party, to the neglect of so grand and imperative a national work, must seem, as it is, the acme of frankness and folly.

GOVERNOR OF UTAH.—Col. Jack Allen, of Shelby county, the gallant fillibuster, is spoken of at Washington as the Governor of Utah. If he would accept this strange and arduous position, we might expect to hear of the Mormons being fought or forced into measures.

ANOTHER VICTIM OF THE BUCHANAN TIDE.—Hon. Samuel Brenton, Member of Congress from Indiana, died at his residence in Fort Wayne on Sunday evening last, from the disease he had contracted at the National Hotel in Washington.

"TRANSPIRE."—The use of this word in the sense of "occur" should be universally condemned. Besides being a glaring impropriety, it is an unpardonable sin against the richness and variety of the language.

BRIDGE COMMENCED.—The bridge over the Ulinois river at Clinton, for the Knoxville and Kentucky Railroad, has been commenced. The bridge will be 500 feet in length. We have encouraging reports from the work along this road.

☞ David Hunt, of Rodney, Mississippi, has contributed twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) to the American Colonization Society.

☞ It is the opinion of the best informed citizens of Indiana that Gov. Willard will very soon call an extra session of the Legislature of that State.

ANOTHER POINT SETTLED.—The question has been mooted, whether foreign goods or merchandize, in transit through the country to an interior port on the 1st of July next, would be considered "in public store" and entitled to entry at the reduced rate of the new tariff. This has been decided in the affirmative by the Secretary of the Treasury, as will be seen from the following copy of the official instructions to the Collector of New York:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 26, 1857.

SIR.—I am in receipt of your letter of the 25th instant, asking whether merchandize in transit in bond to an interior port, but which may not arrive at the port of destination until after the 1st of July next, can be considered as in public store, or bonded warehouse, within the meaning of the act of 3d instant, and the instructions of this Department of 17th instant. In reply I have to state that merchandize so situated, being in the custody of the Government, may be considered as in bonded warehouse, and should it so remain, and not arrive at its port of destination until after the 1st of July next, it would be liable only to the reduced rate of duty.

Very respectfully,
HOWELL COBB,
Secretary of the Treasury.

J. REDFIELD, ESQ.,
Collector of Customs, New York.

IMPORTANT FROM WASHINGTON
[Special Dispatch to the N. Y. Herald.]

WASHINGTON, March 30.

The intelligence received by the last two steamers from Europe is this morning the talk, as affecting our relations with England and France, but especially with the latter, and also as affecting the relations between the three great maritime powers and China. It seems that the Emperor Napoleon has fallen out between the Chinese and English, in which the Americans have taken a small part, is thought to be the beginning of the serious struggle in the East, very different from that of 1840, because Russia stands in the background in support of China against the pretensions of the maritime powers.

It is understood that Lord Napier, the new British Minister, has already had two interviews with Gen. Cass on this subject, and that England expresses the greatest solicitude for the United States to take part in the struggle, which is considered the great contest of commerce and civilization in that quarter of the world. It is understood that England and France, being united on the China question, are willing that the United States should have full swing on this continent—that they should have their sell-full of the Monroe doctrine down even to Cape Horn, provided we appreciated our proper position in the China question.

The determination not to have a government organ was the result of a full Cabinet consultation. The Herald's article on this subject is really an echo of the feelings of the administration.

The difficulties with New Grenada have not yet been formally taken up for consideration by the Cabinet. Some informal conversation has been had, and it is very probable a large fleet will shortly be ordered to the Isthmus, if the present feeling of Mr. Buchanan is carried out. He has great faith in a strong navy.

Notwithstanding the assertions to the contrary, Mr. Buchanan did materially change the Dallas-Clarendon treaty from the form it had assumed in the Senate. His object has been to make it conform as nearly as possible to the American interpretation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and at the same time to exclude all pretence of sovereignty or protectorship on the part of England. With this view all ambiguous language has been stricken out.

As for Memphis, if she will now go vigorously forward and push her Little Rock railroad to a speedy completion, she will have taken a bond of destiny for her future greatness. Without that great work, she can never be much more than half of what she should be.

THE MEETING OF THE AMERICAN [illegible] produce to the support of Governor [illegible] of Kansas is "a failure" Hall yesterday. An unusually large number of delegates are in attendance. Every Congressional District and nearly every county in the state is represented.

Among the distinguished citizens present in this body we notice the excellent President, Hon. Thos. H. Clay, of Fayette, Hon. Humphrey Marshall, of Henry, Hon. Garrett Davis, of Bourbon, W. C. Anderson, Esq., of Boyle, Hon. A. K. Marshall, of Woodford, Roger W. Hanson, of Fayette, Maj. E. B. Bartlett, of Covington, Col. Thos. L. Jones, of Newport, and a number of others of the most prominent Americans in the State.

The assemblage is remarkable for the intelligence and ability which it comprises. A more intellectual body has never been congregated on the soil of Kentucky, and all are animated with high purposes, scorning the artifices of mere party success, and seeking the general welfare of the State and of the nation.

The Council was engaged in receiving reports of committees, electing delegates to the National Council, and organizing business committees. The nomination of a candidate for State Treasurer will be made to-day, and the reports of the committees on organization and resolutions will also be made.

This is one of the most interesting sessions of the State Council that has ever been held. The party will be completely reorganized and greatly strengthened and encouraged by its action, and the delegates will return to their homes eager for the approaching contest, and confident of a triumphant victory.

☞ Memphis congratulates herself, as well she may, that the last bar of iron has been laid upon the Memphis and Charleston railroad. From this time the world may travel from Memphis to Charleston, Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Boston, and nearly all the other principal cities of the Union by railroad without interruption, and our great regret is, that, to do so, they must avoid Louisville altogether. This should not be. How long will it be? This is a question of vast moment to her people, and it awaits their decision.

As for Memphis, if she will now go vigorously forward and push her Little Rock railroad to a speedy completion, she will have taken a bond of destiny for her future greatness. Without that great work, she can never be much more than half of what she should be.

HIGHLY CREDITABLE.—It appears that on Wednesday, the 1st of April, a figure made to look like a man was laid across the track of the Frankfort railroad before the several trains, and that the conductors stopped their respective trains on approaching it. The Democrat thinks that "the whole affair is highly creditable to the officers of the company as it exhibits their solicitude for the safety of human life." It must, to be sure, be most astonishingly creditable to a railroad conductor's wonderful solicitude for human life that he takes the trouble to stop the train when he thinks he sees a man across the track instead of driving right ahead at full speed. Should such a conductor have a public dinner for his unequalled humanity?

THE REMORED TREATY BETWEEN RUSSIA AND PERSIA.—Lord Palmerston recently made the following declaration in the House of Commons upon this subject:

I have the satisfaction of stating to the House, on the authority of the Russian Minister at this Court, and on that of the Russian Minister for Foreign Affairs, that there is no foundation for the report that such a treaty is in existence. To use the words of the Russian Minister at this Court, "It is an entire fable."

Both the Russian Ambassador in Paris and the Persian Envoy positively assert the same thing. The world, we suppose, will have to accept it, until otherwise assured.

CASS, HUELSMANN, AND A NEGRO GIRL.—Our new and venerable Secretary of State has commenced his diplomatic difficulties with a correspondence with the Chevalier Huelsmann. The Chevalier had some dispute with the master of a negro woman that he had hired as a servant, and the master meeting her in the street told her to go home to his house. The woman did so, and the Chevalier has invoked the interposition of the State Department to defend his right as Minister Plenipotentiary of Austria against interference with his servants. In the correspondence with Secretary Cass, the nature of the patriarchal institution is a subject of discussion.

☞ The intelligence from the British West Indies is interesting. In Jamaica, the agitation against the Cuban slave-trade is kept up vigorously, and public meetings had been held to petition the home government to interfere in the matter. In Barbadoes, the legislature had favorably entertained a project for a telegraph through the Lesser Antilles, connecting the North and South American continents, and had declared its readiness to guarantee the necessary privileges and its share of a general contribution toward the enterprise.

Nor in foreign affairs can we always recognize a statesman, in our very lively Premier; he is too much inclined to the slap-dash school, in his dealings with minor powers. However, we did not mean to pass this Jubilee night under review; we only wished to say that but for general younger relief of her Crown is unequalled, and furthermore that this very quality is the one least seldom found, and the one most needed in this period of our country's history.—Athlon.

The editor of the Athlon is a very accomplished scholar, but he not unfrequently says what he evidently doesn't mean.

The latest English advices indicate that probably Parliament will not be dissolved until the middle of May, as the necessary machinery of the Government must be lubricated by the usual expenditures. It is also expected that Lord Palmerston will probably assume a cold attitude and appeal from the House to the country.—Chicago Journal.

The writer of this paragraph clearly hasn't the remotest idea that a dissolution of Parliament, and an appeal from the House to the country, are one and the same thing.

☞ Mr. Walsh, in his last letter from Paris, remarks:

It is a common impression here, that Congress are improvident in declining to undertake without further delay, a Pacific Railway.

We can easily believe it. To impartial observers abroad, the absorption of our Government by the petty concerns of party, to the neglect of so grand and imperative a national work, must seem, as it is, the acme of frankness and folly.

GOVERNOR OF UTAH.—Col. Jack Allen, of Shelby county, the gallant fillibuster, is spoken of at Washington as the Governor of Utah. If he would accept this strange and arduous position, we might expect to hear of the Mormons being fought or forced into measures.

ANOTHER VICTIM OF THE BUCHANAN TIDE.—Hon. Samuel Brenton, Member of Congress from Indiana, died at his residence in Fort Wayne on Sunday evening last, from the disease he had contracted at the National Hotel in Washington.

"TRANSPIRE."—The use of this word in the sense of "occur" should be universally condemned. Besides being a glaring impropriety, it is an unpardonable sin against the richness and variety of the language.

BRIDGE COMMENCED.—The bridge over the Ulinois river at Clinton, for the Knoxville and Kentucky Railroad, has been commenced. The bridge will be 500 feet in length. We have encouraging reports from the work along this road.

☞ David Hunt, of Rodney, Mississippi, has contributed twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) to the American Colonization Society.

☞ It is the opinion of the best informed citizens of Indiana that Gov. Willard will very soon call an extra session of the Legislature of that State.

ANOTHER POINT SETTLED.—The question has been mooted, whether foreign goods or merchandize, in transit through the country to an interior port on the 1st of July next, would be considered "in public store" and entitled to entry at the reduced rate of the new tariff. This has been decided in the affirmative by the Secretary of the Treasury, as will be seen from the following copy of the official instructions to the Collector of New York:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 26, 1857.

SIR.—I am in receipt of your letter of the 25th instant, asking whether merchandize in transit in bond to an interior port, but which may not arrive at the port of destination until after the 1st of July next, can be considered as in public store, or bonded warehouse, within the meaning of the act of 3d instant, and the instructions of this Department of 17th instant. In reply I have to state that merchandize so situated, being in the custody of the Government, may be considered as in bonded warehouse, and should it so remain, and not arrive at its port of destination until after the 1st of July next, it would be liable only to the reduced rate of duty.

Very respectfully,
HOWELL COBB,
Secretary of the Treasury.

J. REDFIELD, ESQ.,
Collector of Customs, New York.

IMPORTANT FROM WASHINGTON
[Special Dispatch to the N. Y. Herald.]

WASHINGTON, March 30.

The intelligence received by the last two steamers from Europe is this morning the talk, as affecting our relations with England and France, but especially with the latter, and also as affecting the relations between the three great maritime powers and China. It seems that the Emperor Napoleon has fallen out between the Chinese and English, in which the Americans have taken a small part, is thought to be the beginning of the serious struggle in the East, very different from that of 1840, because Russia stands in the background in support of China against the pretensions of the maritime powers.

It is understood that Lord Napier, the new British Minister, has already had two interviews with Gen. Cass on this subject, and that England expresses the greatest solicitude for the United States to take part in the struggle, which is considered the great contest of commerce and civilization in that quarter of the world. It is understood that England and France, being united on the China question, are willing that the United States should have full swing on this continent—that they should have their sell-full of the Monroe doctrine down even to Cape Horn, provided we appreciated our proper position in the China question.

The determination not to have a government organ was the result of a full Cabinet consultation. The Herald's article on this subject is really an echo of the feelings of the administration.

The difficulties with New Grenada have not yet been formally taken up for consideration by the Cabinet. Some informal conversation has been had, and it is very probable a large fleet will shortly be ordered to the Isthmus, if the present feeling of Mr. Buchanan is carried out. He has great faith in a strong navy.

Notwithstanding the assertions to the contrary, Mr. Buchanan did materially change the Dallas-Clarendon treaty from the form it had assumed in the Senate. His object has been to make it conform as nearly as possible to the American interpretation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and at the same time to exclude all pretence of sovereignty or protectorship on the part of England. With this view all ambiguous language has been stricken out.

TRIAL OF REV. [illegible] — Trial of Rev. J. S. Kalloch on the charge of adultery commenced on Tuesday, before the Court of Common Pleas in Cambridge, Mass. Mr. Kalloch is defended by R. H. Dana, Charles B., Train, and H. W. Paine.

The trial excites much interest. The indictment charges him with the crime of adultery, committed on the evening of the 30th of January at the Lexington Hotel, with a woman unknown.

The first witness examined was Rev. W. F. Holland, who testified to the fact that the defendant lectured before the East Cambridge Lyceum on the night in question. He declined to accept his (witness') invitation to take tea at his house, but preferred a room in the hotel for the purpose of looking over his notes.

Mrs. Griffin, 10 years old, wife of one of the proprietors of the house, testified to her curiosity being excited by a conversation which she overheard between the defendant and the unknown woman. She saw them through a crevice over the door kiss each other. She saw the woman pinch defendant in the cheek and indulge in other affectionate flirtations, which led witness to suppose they were not married.

Mr. Ephraim B. Bailey, one of the proprietors of the house, testified that Mr. Kallock came to the hotel early in the evening. He introduced the lady with him as his wife, and called for a private room; and also for a warm whisky toddy, which he wished to be brought to him privately. On the cross-examination of this witness was also excited, and while Kallock and his female friend were absent at the lecture, he had a door in the room that partially open.

Without concluding Mr. Bailey's examination, the court adjourned till the following morning.

SEDUCTION CASE IN NICHOLAS COUNTY.—A correspondent of the Paris Flag, writing from Carlisle, says:

The trial of Dr. J. H. Carpenter in our Circuit Court last week, for the seduction of Miss Goram, resulted in his being fined $2,750 and costs. The case will probably cost them $3,000. He is worth about $8,000. His property was attached when the suit was commenced. The Doctor is a married man. Miss Goram had been married to Mr. Dunnington about three months before the birth of the child. Her husband obtained a divorce. She is about 18 years old and modest and retiring in her appearance. The court-house was crowded during the trial, which lasted five days. Among the lawyers in attendance were W. Alexander of your place, and Thos. E. Quisenberry, Esq., of this place, appeared for the prosecution, and Hons. Leander M. Cox, R. H. Buckner, and Col. Wm. Norvills and F. Munger, Esq., far the defence.

A GREAT RACE.—A dispatch from Albany, N. Y., of the 30th ult., says:

Two sporting men of this city, Taylor and Dalton, started on horses from the Exchange, this morning at 5 o'clock, for a one hundred mile race, without rest or feed. The bets are $2,500 a side. Whitehorn, Oneida county, is the termination of the race.

The horses passed Fonda, forty-three miles of the distance, at 9:15 A. M. Time, 4 hours 15 minutes. They arrived at Little Falls at 17 minutes past 12, the Dalton horse still a little ahead, but in bad condition.

Taylor, the New York horse, is the winner of the one hundred mile race. He arrived at White-town at 3:30 P. M., making the distance in twelve hours and a half. The Albany horse was a quarter of a mile behind.

MAIL ROBBERY.—We have already mentioned the robbery, on the 4th of March, of the mail, near Aberdeen, Arkansas. Among the packages of value stolen was the following:

No. 6357. $108. Letter from J. Brump to C. S. Sneed, dated Pine Bluff, January 26, 1857; purports to have enclosed $108, Louisville, Ky.

[Correspondence of the Louisville Journal.]

NEW ORLEANS, March 25, 1857.

The heaviest portion of the season's business is now over. The cotton crop appears to have disposed of. Cotton is still coming in, but only in small lots, and the bulk is now in second and third hands. The receipts of Western produce are also falling off. The hard times and dry goods men are still busy with some Texas and Arkansas dealers, but stocks are now exceedingly reduced, and purchasers and purchases are daily becoming fewer and lighter. More persons are leaving the city than coming to it. Some handsome remittances have been made here this year, particularly in the cotton factorage business. Several houses will realize in clear gain over $150,000 each. The past winter has been agreeable, and, on the whole, a fair average one. I have been pleased with their visit, though many of those who stopped at the St. Charles went away with bitter complaints of exhorbitant charges, miserable fare, and poor attention. This is to be deeply regretted, has not been conducted in a manner to improve its reputation, and the complaints made have, in most instances, been too well founded—the table and attendance on the ladies' side of the house have been miserable.

Reports from the country show that the recent cold weather has throughout the State retarded the growing crops to a very great extent, though there is no material injury, it is believed, has been done except to the fruit, much of which in some localities is completely destroyed.

Some decided improvements have recently taken place in the affairs of the Texas Pacific Railroad. One or two meetings of parties interested have been held; the domicil of the controling board has been changed to this city, and the climate of our great Western possessions on this coast are treasures untold, and not purchasable anywhere else. Today the sun shines here with warmth and brilliancy, and the country blooms in green, stock ranging on the boundless grassy plains, fat and independent of their owners, and the purest water for man and beast that ever gushed forth from God's footstool. The country abounds with plenty, and, after four years of as hard times as any people could well endure, we are emerging again into prosperity—a wiser people from bitter experience.

Our Indian war is closing, and that charming region of Oregon lying east of the Cascade Mountains is ready now for the whites to form settlements. That is the most charming country and climate my eyes ever beheld. Our Oregon volunteers will leave there last winter, and, from the general accounts which they gave of the weather, and their joie and bien appearance on their return, I have consistive persons should settle. Corn, rye, oats, potatoes, sugar beets, cabbages, onions, melons, barley, clover, timothy, tobacco, China sugar-cane, sheep, cattle, hogs, horses, mules, and Young Americans can be reared in the greatest abundance and perfection. As a people, we have bought too much and sold too little for our own good, since this country was settled by the American. Now, numerous manufactories are springing up amongst us. A large woolen factory, under the guidance of responsible wealthy men, is being erected in Salem. Machine foundries, nail factories, sawmills, sadderies, flouring mills, plow-shops, &c., are going up all over the country, the farmers are producing wheat, wool, butter, hides, corn, pork, beef, mutton, &c., in great abundance and of superior quality. The greatest drawback to our general prosperity is that we are cursed with a Legislature, and that, too, with the power and perpetuity on infidelity and the brandy cask.

Thrice has the subject of a State government been brought before the voters of Oregon, and thrice voted down by the legislature, now to vote it down again, has again enacted that we shall vote yes or no on that subject, at our next annual election! That mysterious personage, known as "Sam," has made himself heard on the banks of the "Willamette," just out between the Chinese and English, at which the Americans have taken a small part, is thought to be the beginning of the serious struggle in the East, very different from that of 1840, because Russia stands in the background in support of China against the pretensions of the maritime powers.

I understand that Lord Napier, the new British Minister, has already had two interviews with Gen. SATURDAY, APRIL 4, 1857.

THE SUPREME COURT.—There may be, and certainly there are, different opinions as to the points which the Supreme Court of the United States pronounced upon in the late Dred Scott case. Many think that the court decided right, and many others think that it decided wrong. Those who think the one way, and those who think the other, may, for aught we know, be equally honest.

There is one point, however, in regard to which all intelligent American citizens, who recognize the binding force of the constitution of the United States, must and no doubt will agree. It is, that whatever the Supreme Court has decided in regard to matters legitimately before it must stand as the law of the land, either until the constitution shall be changed or until a contrary or different decision shall be made by the same high tribunal hereafter. The United States judiciary, by the theory of our Republican Government, is the highest, the authorized, the final expounder of the constitution and the laws, and any other resistance to its decisions than argument is, to all intents and purposes, nullification.

The people, or any portion of them, unquestionably have the power to seek to bring about ultimately a reversal of any decision of the Supreme Court by supporting only those men for the Presidency who, if elected, will, so fast as vacancies occur upon the bench of the court, nominate such persons to fill them as will be in favor of the reversal; but this would be a very slow process, and, we think, a most improper and injurious one. It was never contemplated for an instant by the framers of the constitution, nor any of the old fathers of the country, that the masses of the people, instead of relying upon the Supreme Court for judicial decisions, should first make the decisions in their own minds and then go to work to elect Presidents who should choose Judges to confirm those decisions. Such markethouse and cross-roads trials of great judicial questions would be a subversion of the spirit of our institutions, and ought not to be encouraged by law-abiding men in any section. They would be a scandal upon our Republic.

Surely it would be infinitely better, because more in accordance with the form of our Government and the spirit of the public, and should convince the South, that she has given her votes to one who is endeavoring to break down her institutions and add to the present preponderance of the free States. Where are the old States' Rights men and strict constructionists to take refuge? Is it in the arms of this modern Democracy, whose principles are thus promulgated by the President of their choice?

Brethren, it is the duty of this Council so to organize the American party in every county and voting precinct in the State, that the full and entire vote may be brought out, in support of such candidates as the nominating delegates may place before them for their suffrages.

Our opponents are alive to the importance of the election to be held in August. Their strongest men will be brought forward as candidates for Governor, and their most untiring and strenuous efforts will be given to secure their election.

They must be met by corresponding exertions on our part. Is there an American present who is not ready to dev

FOR STATE TREASURER,

THOMAS L. JONES,

of Campbell County.

THE SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD.—A meeting of the Directory of the Southern Pacific Railroad was held at New Orleans on the 26th ult., and Geo. S. Yerger, Esq., of Mississippi, was elected president of the company. The board of directors is composed chiefly of Southern men, and this selection of a chief executive officer from the South will attract to the enterprise the sympathies and support of the whole South. The only difficulties that have hitherto been encountered in the prosecution of this great undertaking originated in the fact that the management was at first confided to Northern men of notoriety as speculators. Fears were entertained that it would, under such auspices, be converted into a mere fancy stock-jobbing affair, and a want of confidence was engendered which was unfavorable to the rapid prosecution of the work. These objections are now all happily removed and the company is completely identified with the South and placed under the control of gentlemen of such standing and ability and high standing as to command universal confidence.

The New Orleans Picayune thus alluded to the proposed change in the management of the company a few days before it was consummated:

> This road, of which we have had occasion to speak as an enterprise in actual and prodigious progress, will, we understand, shortly be placed in a position to command the confidence and the support of the whole South. It will be, as it ought to be, a southern road, resting upon southern connections, as well as upon southern capital. Our friend, who is in the main from the South, and a most distinguished citizen of a most distinguished State, and in all likelihood, he will be none the less than what a wise foreseen would have suggested at the commencement of the undertaking, as altogether the proper head of the work, should he be pressed forward. The council of the road should be Southern, its direction, or a majority of them, near the scene of operations. If the policy be established, and we are assured that it will, it will remove the last remaining shade upon the prosperity which he engenders, and which the lapse of years alone can remove. Then will the Southern people and strangers who abused the public for some time with an inflated credit, begin to repent.
>
> The enterprise, proportions as to its proportions are, is, nevertheless, in a state of progress—the work is going forward—and there can be little doubt of its being urged forward to completion, alike triumphant and wonderful, if the practical organization is such as to ensure the steadiness of the Southern people. If this road was in the North, with the chairmanship of which is holding on to existence, Boston, Providence, Albany, Hartford, Worcester, Lowell, Salem, Chelsea, Cohasset, Cohoes, Chicago, Cincinnati, Toledo, Cleveland, Buffalo, New York and Brooklyn Exchange, Kossuth, China, by opposition lines, one running east and the other west, whether the one or the Western line would not reach Sacramento twenty-four hours before the eastern one? A merchant in Sacramento should telegraph to a stock-broker in New York: "Buy me a thousand shares of Nicaragua to-morrow," what would "to-morrow" mean, if the day-book had reached that point in a year.
> Wagon Road to the Pacific.—Letter writers from Washington state that the three Departments of the Interior, of War, and of the Post-office are uniting to hurry forward the construction of a wagon road from the Mississippi to the Pacific. Such a road is an indispensable prerequisite for a Pacific railroad. The Department of War appropriates $100,000, the "Interior" half a million, and the Post-office Department contracts to pay $600,000 per annum for carrying the mails over the new route.

The French legislative body was occupied in the beginning of last month with the important topic of an adequate supply of guano for France. An experienced agriculturist, one of the speakers, mentioned sixty thousand tons as the least amount required annually. The government has appointed a commission to investigate the means of obtaining all that should be needed.

According to official returns, the decrease in France of the produce of the silk worms has been enormous since 1858; then it amounted to fifty-two millions pounds of cocoons, worth a hundred and seventeen millions of francs; last year it was only fifteen millions of pounds, estimated at fifty-seven millions of francs. France may well be anxious about her relations with China.

Sir A. Bannerman, Governor of the Bahamas, in his recent message to the Legislature, made some most serious charges against American shipmasters trading to the islands. He asserts that some of them—there are honorable exceptions—are so utterly unworthy of the confidence placed in them that they scarcely agree with the wreckers for a share of the salvage, and then run the vessel and cargo to wreck. The Governor recommends some effectual check for this crime, which is very horrible, if practiced.

The sales of cotton at New Orleans for the week ending on the 27th were 46,000 bales, while the receipts were only 22,000 bales.

☞ Scepticism has no doubt kept many a poor soul from celestial happiness and the enjoyment of perfect bliss, so it has caused many a one to lose that greatest and most desirable ornament of each and every one of the human race, a luxuriant head of hair. But the article and the facts in regard to it are now before the people, and those who neglect to use Prof. Wood's Hair Restorative may long regret that necessity will eventually compell them to take their bald heads with a few scattering gray hairs with sorrow to the grave. Bear this in mind, and g t a bottle of the restorative and be happy.

KENTUCKY BANK STOCKS.—At New York, on Wednesday, 5 shares Bank of Kentucky stock sold at 114¾ and 20 shares Northern Bank of Kentucky at 123½. The New York Courier, referring to these sales, says:

> Kentucky Bank shares, yielding 12 to 15 ₱ cent. annually, command a high premium in this market. Farmers' Bank shares are scarce.

COMMITTED FOR MURDER.—In the Police Court on Saturday, Judge Johnston committed to jail on Thomas Traver to answer the charge of murdering his wife, and John Sweeny for the murder of Caspar Fuss. Both of these persons will doubtless be tried in May. There are now about ten persons in prison on the charge of murder.

BARLEY CROP RUINED.—Intelligence from Mason and Fleming counties assures us that the very severe cold and dry weather experienced in that region during the last several weeks has ruined the entire barley crop. Persons in the barley trade had better husband the old stock. The wheat also is greatly injured.

☞ It has always been the boast of Col. Benton that he had never been in a foreign country.—Strangely enough however a few days ago he allowed himself to be drawn over the suspension bridge at Niagara into the British dominions. We are afraid Old Bullion is losing his intense patriotism.

SPAIN AND MEXICO.—No War.—The Washington correspondent of the New York Times writes under date of the 1st:

> Whatever opinions may exist elsewhere as to the probability of a war between Spain and Mexico, no such impression is entertained in well-informed quarters here. The notes of preparation are not considered serious, and their solution, which is by no means distant, will expose the weak deception that has been practised upon the credulity of those who have been disposed to accept appearances for fact. Vessels of war may be sent to rendezvous at Havana, but they will be sent back again without having fulfilled the object of a seemingly warlike mission. The whole object and distinctive feature of the court at Madrid, any chance was gladly seized upon by which attention could be directed from their own internal strifes, and concentrated upon some object that might enlist, even for a time, the sympathy and spirit of the nation. The Spaniard is jealous of national as of personal honor, and Mexico had affronted it, in the neglect or refusal to punish the murderers of Spanish subjects, alleged to be in its service under the command of General Alvarez. This case offered an opportunity for a sensation. The Spanish Chargé d'Affaires at Mexico demanded the passports, returned home and laid the case before the Ministry. They invoked the Cortes to come to the rescue of the country, and bury the hatchets of fraction. The upshot of this appeal was the preparation of which we hear so much, and are destined to see so little, and the end will be, another of the many favors which are too often played upon the stage of nations.

☞ White's Detector issued the following extra on Saturday:

> New and Very Dangerous Counterfeit.—Fives, on the "Bank of Louisville;" vignette, portrait of Millard Fillmore. Female on each end. The die-work on the left of the faces are badly executed. A peep through one of our magnifying glasses will show that the lady on the left has no nose, but a mere black speck where it ought to be.

ADDITIONAL BY THE ASIA.

NEW YORK, April 4.

The steamer Fulton touched at Cowes on the 20th. The Circassian sailed on the 19th from Newfoundland.

London, Saturday, noon.—It was announced in Parliament this morning that the Queen's intention was to dissolve Parliament in order to ascertain, in the most constitutional manner, the sense of the people in the present mode of public affairs.

A dispatch from Paris says that the King of Prussia finally agreed to settle the Neufchatel difficulty, renouncing his rights upon condition that the title of Prince of Neufchatel be retained in the Prussian crown, and that he be allowed, for four years, the revenues of his ancient domains in the canton, and that an amnesty be granted his partisans there.

The final sittings of the Paris Conference on Turkish affairs, chiefly concerning the principalities, will be held in June.

The Sardinian Chamber of Deputies voted five millions of francs to be expended in the fortifications of Alessandria in an immediate state of defense, in view of possible hostilities with Austria.

Full instructions were sent from Cadix on the 12th of March, to the Spanish consul of Havana, respecting the difficulties in Mexico.

The Irish liberals have adopted their electioneering programme, of which the following are leading points:

1st. Tenant right, as recently modified.

2d. Disendowment of all religious sects, and the abolition of the Irish church as a State establishment.

3d. Religious equality, involving the repeal of ecclesiastical titles' act.

4th. Enlargement of county franchise.

5th. Abolition of property qualification.

France.—A modification of the French cabinet is again discussed. It is believed that the object is to incorporate the cabinet with the State absolutism of the imperial family.

Spain.—It is rumored that Concha will be recalled from Cuba. Doubtful.

Denmark.—The Sound Dues treaty, published in Denmark, engages that no levy any dues whatever on vessels passing the belts on the Sound; also to maintain lights, buoys, &c., at approaches of its ports and along the straits, &c.

China.—Private letters at Paris say that the later and three accomplices had been convicted of an attempt to poison the British Charge and family, at Hong Kong, and shot.

It is said that a great portion of Canton, within and without the walls, is destroyed.

The Paris correspondent of the Daily News asserts positively that negotiations are progressing between France and England for sending a French army of 30,000 men to China.

The Russian Minister at Constantinople has demanded an explanation respecting the force of 300 Poles fitted out by English sympathisers and landed in Circassia.

The steamship Joseph Peeriers, from Charleston, arrived at Havre on the 18th.

The steamer Lafayette, from New Orleans, laden with cotton, put into port at Fayal, badly damaged. She discharged her cargo at that place.

Breadstuffs—Southern flour unchanged; sales at 28@29s. New York State flour 27@28s. Ohio 29 @30s.

A PERFUMED BREATH.—What lady or gentleman would remain under the curse of a disagreeable breath when for 25 cts. the "Balm of a Thousand Flowers" as a dentifrice, would not only render it sweet but leaves the teeth white as alabaster? Many persons do not know their breath is bad, and the subject is so delicate their friends will not mention it. Pour a single drop of the "Balm" on your tooth-brush and wash the teeth night and morning. A fifty-cent bottle will last a year.

A BEAUTIFUL COMPLEXION may easily be acquired by using the "Balm of a Thousand Flowers." It will remove tan, pimples, and freckles from the face, and if used for a short time, will render a brunette as fair as a lily. Wet a towel, pour on two or three drops, and wash the face night and morning.

SHAVING MADE EASY.—Wet your shaving brush in shell-road water, cold water, hot water, three drops of "Balm of a Thousand Flowers," rub the beard well, and it will make a beautiful soft lather, much facilitating the operation of shaving.

Horrible Murder by Slaves.—The Memphis Eagle of the 29th says. "A gentleman just from Lake Providence informs us that a horrible murder was committed on some slaves upon the body of their master, W. H. Harry, of that neighborhood, on the 21st ult."

Another Steamboat Sunk.—About 5½ o'clock Wednesday morning, while the steamboat Buffalo, late of the Merchants' Line to Albany, was engaged in the relief of the Isaac Newton (having been employed by the owners of the latter steamer for that purpose), she sprung a leak, and sunk alongside.—She had on board a deck-load of casks. It had been observed the night previous that she was leaking; but the fact not receiving sufficient attention, she headed over, taking in water at her ports, and sunk to the bottom of the river. She is an old boat, but probably can be raised without difficulty. N. Y. Jour. Com.

FRAUD IN FISH.—The Philadelphia Ledger says that city is the largest market in the United States for mackerel for consumption. It is charged that some dealers there are in the habit of repacking the mackerel received from Massachusetts, filling up with salt, and then branding the packages as having been inspected in that Massachusetts. This, the Ledger learns, is carried to such an extent that a purchaser in buying twenty-five pounds will probably receive but sixteen pounds. In consequence of this fraud, several merchants of Philadelphia have received from Mr. Wm. F. Davis, Inspector General of Fish for Massachusetts, a list of his deputy inspectors, which has been published, so that the public can ascertain if the brand upon the package is a genuine one.

☞ Col. J. E. Gowen of Boston, the contractor for raising the sunken fleet at Sebastopol, will leave for Liverpool, whence he will proceed overland to the scene of his operations. Two vessels, containing the machinery and equipments necessary for the work, will shortly leave Philadelphia for Sebastopol.

HOLD THEM TO THE ISSUE.—A well-grounded fear has already seized upon the Sag-Nicht leaders in Kentucky and Tennessee that a Waterloo defeat awaits their party in the approaching August elections. "Couling events cast their shadows before," and the anxious agitation, the ominous fluttering among the demagogues in the Sag-Nicht camp, are indications that the shadows of defeat have already fallen in great dark lines among them. They see the handwriting upon the wall, in which they read their certain and inevitable doom. None know better than these Sag-Nicht leaders the infamous knavery by which majorities were obtained for Buchanan, in the November election, in Kentucky and Tennessee; they are conscious that the same means will not be available to a similar extent in August next, and while they blow their trumpets loudly to try to revive the drooping spirits of their followers, they feel in their hearts that the battle is already lost to them. Their guilty consciences have whispered to them the warning that the hour of the downfall of their arrogant power is approaching, and they begin to see that they will never be able to rally the masses of the honest yeomanry of these States around the fraud-stained banners of Sag-Nichtism.

While the Americans everywhere are firm, united and determined, the Sag-Nicht forces are distracted and divided. Drunk with their success in the Presidential campaign, the Sag-Nicht spoils-seekers swarm in every direction, and, in the districts where there are Sag-Nicht majorities, they are fiercely wrangling among themselves for nominations, as it conscious that this is certainly the last chance for Sag-Nicht success, even in their most impregnable strongholds. Meanwhile, this rascally frauds that were perpetrated by the Buchanan party have been exposed, the shameless duplicity resorted to by the so-called Democracy has been laid bare to popular scrutiny, and tens and hundreds of thousands of honest voters, who were beguiled by wily and unscrupulous demagogues to support the Democratic candidates, have become disgusted with the hideous depravity and corruption of the party to which their suffrages were given. A reaction has taken place in popular sentiment. The purity and patriotism of the principles of the American party are better known and appreciated than they ever have been. Prominent leaders of the Democratic party in the South have perceived the tide of popular favor setting strongly toward the establishment of these principles, and have reluctantly acknowledged their justice and propriety while they still abuse the party by which they are advocated. The discussions of the past Presidential canvass and the subsequent developments have opened the eyes of the masses of our countrymen to the faithlessness and iniquitous practices of the Democracy, and have taught them the truth and purity of the American party.

The opponents of the American party are anxious to avoid any issue in which the pure question of Americanism shall take precedence of all others. They fear the discussion of American principles, and, if the Americans, in Kentucky and Tennessee and throughout the Union, will hold their opponents to the real issue, will compel them to take ground for or against the distinctive principles announced and advocated by the American party, the result will averywhere be a glorious American triumph.

Among the resolutions adopted by the State council of Delaware, at a recent meeting, the following is especially worthy of consideration:

Resolved, That, while the American party in the State of Indiana wisely tolerate free discussion and free expression of individual opinion on the various political questions of the day, yet, under every political contingency, the question of Americanism shall take precedence of all others.

Our opponents have hitherto been successful in dodging the issues presented by the American party. During the last Presidental canvass, in the South and in the North, they poured out torrents of abuse against "Know-Nothingism" and the "Know-Nothings;" they villified, abused, misrepresented, and calumniated the American party and its members, but they did not dare to attack or discuss its principles. Whenever challenged to do so, they avoided the issue by declaring that it would be time enough to engage in such a discussion after the slavery question should be settled. Democrats and Black Republicans sought sedulously to persuade the people that the slavery question was the paramount issue, and that the examination of the American question must be deferred until the insane quarrel between the North and the South could be definitely settled.

They undertook to settle this vexed question. The Democrats in the South declared that the election of Buchanan would settle it in favor of the extension of slavery. The Republicans in the North contended that the election of Fremont would settle it in favor of Freesoilism. Buchanan has been elected, but the question has not been settled. The new administration has given renewed impetus and added fierceness to this agitation. The South has been most egregiously deceived, and the people have discovered that they have let go the substance to seize the shadow. They have found out that it is the object and desire of the Democratic and Republican parties to foster the agitation of this question to the utter ruin of the Republic and the destruction of the Union. They now see their error in permitting designing demagogues, who feed and batten upon this accursed agitation, to lead them away from the real issue—the only really useful, substantial issue—the pure question of Americanism. They will not again be so easily duped, but will demand an examination of the principles advanced by the American party.

We most earnestly urge our friends everywhere to profit by this experience, and, whatever extraneous questions may be presented, to make the "pure question of Americanism" the paramount issue in every political contest. Let us hold our opponents to this issue. Let us force them either to admit the correctness of our position or to attempt to defend the converse of our principles, for in such a contest Americanism will always be proudly triumphant. The success of the American party, the establishment of American principles, will thus be assured, the welfare of the nation will be promoted, and the integrity of the Union preserved and perpetuated.

ROMAN CATHOLIC RIGHT OF SPEECH.—A few days ago the Rev. Mr. Tracy, of Nebraska Territory, a Catholic priest, visited New York city, and, while there, lectured in a public place though not in a church, upon the advantages which he thought Irishman would derive from emigrating to the West. After the lecture was over, Archbishop Hughes, who appeared to have been listening lucey, rose in the gallery, and, in violent speech of half an hour, severely rebuked and rudely insulted the lecturer for daring to address a public meeting of any kind without first letting him know his intention and obtaining his permission. He furthermore added, that, even if the priest had asked leave to lecture upon the advantages of Irish emigration to the West, the leave would not have been granted.

From this, the public may form some idea as to the amount of freedom enjoyed by the Roman Catholics of our country. American citizens are in the habit of taking it for granted, that any man, whether priest or layman, is at perfect liberty to lecture in any city he pleases upon any proper subject he pleases without having to obtain permission from any civil or church functionary; but such an impression, so far as it exists, is all wrong. A Catholic priest must not go to a city and address his fellow-citizens upon even the most indifferent topic without express leave from the higher church powers; and, if he asks for leave, it is likely to be denied him. He must not act as if his soul were his own on penalty of its being consigned to the devil. Thus the Popish government is a vile and accursed despotism, crushing out all liberty from the souls of its subjects. The priest is not more the slave of the Archbishop than are the priests of the priest or than the Archbishop is of the Pope. There is no exercise of fire that can burn under water, but there is no sort of liberty that can exist in the Roman Catholic church.

HONOR TO THE AMERICANS OF THE FIRST DISTRICT.—We were much gratified by the adoption of the resolution offered in the State Council, referring to the First district Americans. The Spartan band of heroes, politically overthrown, deserve their crowns of laurel, as well as those who fought at Thermopylæ. It may be invidious to make comparisons, where all have endeavored to do their duty, but none of the party elsewhere will deem this notice an imputation upon their loyalty and devotion to American principles. With the exception of this district, the Americans of the "purchase" can claim the banner, for they have won the proud honor of increasing their strength from 5,955 for Morehead to 6,122 for Fillmore. If Buchanan votes down there did grow spontaneously, as waggletails turn to mosquito swarms, these sturdy Americans came forward to record their votes and protest against the iniquities of the present dynasty. They have no political honors to bestow upon their champions, the loaves and fishes are never placed within their hungered mouths: pure devotion to principle is their only reward, and this meed of praise was but a well-deserved tribute to their worth, and will be more prized by them than the mere possession of political spoils or honors. The immutability of our cherished principles is graven by the omnipotent hand upon the pages of eternity, and, though some of our gallant band have faltered and fallen in the last engagement, those who remain will be the bright nucleus around which will gather victorious hosts. All hail then to the gallant Americans wherever they are in the minority, for by their steadfast adherence to principle they show their pure patriotism, and will surely lead the van in our future victories.

☞ E. L. Rice has been expelled by Judge Moore from the Kenton county bar. The cause of his expulsion, as we understand, is for adding to a letter the word "president," and producing the letter thus altered in a suit as evidence. He is said also to be under indictment in the Kenton circuit court, for altering the records of that court. The Winchester Chronicle hopes that the "fury will award him ten years' service under Zeb Ward at Frankfort."

☞ Capt. Soule, of the bark Oregon, arrived at New York from Havre, reports that, on the 25th ult., while in latitude 41 06, longitude 66 30, during a dense fog, three balls of fire passed over his vessel with a noise similar to the detonation of a cannon. The last of the three, while passing over, burst about the masthead, covering the deck with sparks of fire. Every person on deck at the time was knocked down, but none were injured.

A Madrid letter of the 9th of March says: The projected expedition against Mexico assumes an aspect of some importance. Considerable preparations are making. General Pezuela is spoken of for the chief command. The choice of the Government is said to be between him and General Lersundi, the present Minister of Marine.

THE LATE NEWS FROM NICARAGUA.—The following details of the Nicaragua news we copy from the New York Tribune of Friday. The Tribune does not favor Walker;

> The news from Rivas, Nicaragua, headquarters of Gen. Walker, is up to the 16th. Gen. Walker and Army were in health, and had plenty of provisions and ammunition.
>
> On the 16th, Gen. Walker, with 400 men, made an attack on Gen. Ponce, compelling the abandonment of the enemy. After driving the enemy and destroying the place, he burned a part of the town most important to the allied army, when he marched his whole force against Gen. Ponce's encampments, had marched by another road to make an attack on Rivas, between them. Walker marched for that point, and had about 500 of the enemy in full retreat at the forks of three roads, hotly pursued by Gen. Henningsen and his command, who had driven them out of Rivas, upon their attack, with great slaughter.
>
> On either side of the road, where the allied forces were met by General Walker, was an impenetrable growth of cactus, making it impossible for them to retreat, and placing them between the double fire of General Walker in their front and General Henningsen in their rear, in consequence of which its allies were completely panic-stricken, and throwing down their arms, stood paralyzed, unable to move from the spot. Walker ordered a charge, and their officers were killed, and very few of their troops escaped being killed or wounded.
>
> The allies, by their own account, lost 287 killed and over 300 wounded. Gen. Walker estimates their loss at about 500—the killed and wounded. Gen. Walker's loss was 6 killed and 31 wounded. The slaughter was so great that Gen. Walker was unable to proceed further in the day, and was compelled to order the bodies burned, to prevent putrefaction and insure the health of the city of Rivas, which order was carried into effect the same evening. The battle was at San Juan del Sur when the Orizaba left.
>
> The gunboat Granada, stiffed by Walker, could hold fifteen if he would stay there, but he would never find time out to attack the steamers and get his small force cut up. The Granada is a fine vessel, and carries a long 32-pounder and 20-pounder.
> Walker's prisoners were completely panic-stricken, and was a good reliable friend of Walker's, and for that reason I have not the truth of his statements. The former occasion I had some letters put into my possession by Col. Lockridge, of Col. Fry's staff, but failing to be caught with them upon me I destroyed them; and, having understood that Gen. Rogers was on board of the vessels, I applied to him for the contents of the letters, but he refused to him; and, in the course of a conversation with a friend of his, he stated that the principal object of the expedition was for a party Walker's present position at Rivas.

CARROTS.—Next in value to Sugar Beet is the Carrot as a succulent winter food for milch cows. We place it second to the sugar beet because it is rather more difficult to keep free from weeds in the early stage of its growth, and also because a little more laborious to harvest. But for these facts, we should consider it much the most valuable of the two; and, as it has the advantage of exactly suiting the taste of the horse, we should grow it for horses if we kept no cows. Horses require some succulent food in early spring. If they have been kept on dry food all winter, they frequently suffer much from costiveness and a general lassitude, appearing dull and feverish, sometimes for many weeks, in the first warm weather of spring, before the grass puts up. Most farmers are aware that a few hours' run on fresh grass will in a few days remove these symptoms. They should also know that carrots, fed two or three times a week at this season, will entirely prevent them.

If carrots were more frequently grown, their value would be better appreciated for their medicinal properties on horses. City horses, if they could be afforded this luxury, would come into service in the spring with much better health and sleeker coats. As food for milch cows, their value is well known. We hope to see them grown more generally for this purpose.

There are several kinds of carrots, some highly recommended for the table, and others for stock. For the table, the best kind we have ever seen were grown from seed distributed by the Patent Office last year. It is a French carrot of a rich orange color, and of a long oval shape. They are very heavy, and, as they do not run off into a long taproot, we should think them valuable as a field crop, as they are much less labor to harvest than the long-rooted kinds. We do not remember what name they bore, but have seen the same kind described in Downing's Horticulturist many years ago. We hope any one who may have received this kind will save some for seed. From a small experiment made last year, we think it likely this variety would produce well if sowed broadcast on clean, well-prepared land.

The soil for carrots, as indeed all root crops, should be rich and deep. It should be got into the finest possible condition by repeated plowing, harrowing, and dragging or rolling. The seed should be planted in drills 2½ to 3 feet apart, and, as soon as the plants are large enough to mark the rows, they should be ridged back with hoes. They will probably require a second hand-working before they are large enough to run the cultivator through the rows, after which they require but little attention; though, if the soil is at all tenacious and liable to settle close after a rain, it would be of great service to run a subsoil plow each side of the rows as deep as it can be made to enter. At the second hand-working, when the plants are well set, if too thick in the row, they may be chopped out with a narrow hoe so that they will stand in the row 4 to 8 inches apart. If not thinned by hand, they will grow several together instead of one; but, as hand-thinning is laborious, this is of no great importance, as they grow very well in this way, though not so large as if they stood singly.

The great difficulty in growing this crop is occasioned by its very slow growth at first; at this period, therefore, it requires special care to prevent the rows from becoming foul, for should the grass or weeds get the start of the crop, it is a most hopeless condition, hand weeding being the only remedy. We have known the weeds kept down by dragging a hand rake along the rows, and if the seed come up well, this is a good plan, as some of the plants will also be destroyed with the weeds, thus making it less laborious to thin with the hoe afterwards. Next to the oval kind before spoken of, we consider the long orange carrot the best for all purposes; indeed, it may be better than that kind, but, from a small experiment made last year, we set a high value upon it. Rich, deep soil, and clean culture, will insure a crop of carrots, amply repaying all cost and labor.

Carrots should not be taken up till late in the fall, as they make considerable growth after the first cold month of the season. They are sometimes plowed out, but if the roots are very long they cannot be got out in this way without much loss. They are easily pulled by hand after throwing the earth from the rows with a two-horse plow. They keep pretty well in the ground, but we do not advise this plan, as they are difficult to get at when wanted through the winter.

They may be gathered and put up into piles of convenient size, and covered with earth or put into a cellar, where they are ready for use at all times. If buried in the earth the tops may be cut off; if kept in a cellar, unless placed in very large piles, the tops may be kept on, as they are relished by stock, and keep pretty well.

Where later is less of an object than breadth of land, carrots may be planted in rows 12 to 16 inches apart; in some parts of the country this plan is practised, but we apprehend that in the southwest the most economical plan is that which admits of horse culture.

As a means of giving the young plants a chance to keep ahead of the weeds, the seed may be sprouted slightly before planting, but this is an operation requiring much care, as they will be injured if the sprout grow but long enough to be broken off in planting. To sprout the seed, pour warm water upon them, which strain off after a few hours; put them into a bag large enough to allow the seed to spread out rather thin, and cover the bag with sods, in a sunny place. As soon as the sprouts begin to show themselves plant the seed.

With proper culture in suitable soil the yield of carrots is enormous. At the late annual meeting of the New York Agricultural Society premiums were awarded for field crops; the premium crop of carrots was 1,600 bushels per acre. The following extract speaks of their value for horses:

For two months past I have fed my two horses upon carrots and hay. My horses are in constant service on the road; and under this treatment they steadily come out at the end of the week looking better than when they commenced. My dose is two quarts, morning, noon, and at night—four to each horse; they have as much good, sweet English hay as they will eat, and oats in addition to them dry or otherwise. This latter I have always used since I have had the management of horses; and I am satisfied that it is the cheapest and best way in which it can be given to the horse. There is no waste, and horses eat it better, and have more time to rest, which is quite an important consideration, when the horse is liable to be taken from the stable at any moment. I am satisfied this is the better way of feeding horses, nor is there any cheaper one, that I have ever tried, than the one mentioned. If there is, will not some person who knows please report? I always eat them myself before I give to eating. Carrots are most excellent for horses whose wind is in any way affected, such as the heaves, &c. Those who have tried them for this purpose will, I think, agree with me in this; if not, just try the experiment and be satisfied. They are usually cheap, compared with other articles of food of equal nutritiveness. Last year I paid nine dollars per ton, this year eleven, and at the latter price I prefer them to oats, measure for measure.

HONEY LOCUST FOR POSTS.—A correspondent in Chattanooga wishes to know if honey locust will answer for posts. It is not at all suitable for this purpose, being less durable in the ground than common red beech. When straight-grained, it is sometimes made into rails, but even to this purpose it is not well-adapted, being heavy and not very durable.

UNITED STATES AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The following are the committees of arrangement in the respective departments:

LOCAL COMMITTEES OF ARRANGEMENTS.

Executive Committee—Hilton Mallett, Ed. B. Dudley, James Guthrie, Thos. H. Hunt, J. B. O'Bannon, W. J. Adams, W. W. Watkins, Isaac Everett, and W. H. Pulaney.

On Invitation and Reception—Col. George Hancock, John Barbee, G. Syratt, John C. Hull, Col. John Preston, the Rev. Robert Mallory.

On Implements—Gen. Tench Tilghman, Orford, Md.; Jno. D. Lang, Uniontown, Md.; Hon. Wm. Kelly, Jr., Amwell, Hunterdon, N. Y.; Jos. A. Moore and Jas. M. Mina, Pennsylvania; and Henry S. Olcott, American Institute, N. Y., secretary.

On Cattle—Robert Mallory, Thornton Merriwether, E. L. Du Hamel, Jas. Andrews, Col. Wm. Shelby, Robert A. Gardner, and R. L. Noel.

On Sheep and Swine—R. Ashgrin, A. L. Shotwell, Thos. H. Hunt, Jno. Y. Gray, A. O'Bannon, A. D. Hunt, Robt. Murray, and A. Thomas, J. A. Merriweather, and Pollock Barlow.

On Sheep and Swine—Owen W. Thomas, James Garvin, Jr., Wm. Garvin, Jr., Jno. Ward, W. Wilkinson, Jr., E. Drake, and Jacob Ihle.

On Farm Buildings—Wm. Watkins, B. D. O'Harrow, J. W. Tuscher, J. L. Huffman, W. L. Glover, Jr., Wm. Sanders, Lorenzo Young, Warren Mitchell, W. A. Merriweather.

On Insects—W. H. Walker, Thos. Smith, A. Throckmorton, Jno. Baker, Jr., Alfred Parties, R. G. Bate.

On Farm Produce—Frank P. Dethearse, Gov. Smith, F. J. Turleton Dixon, Johannes, Henry Frederick, Jno. Hall, Jr., Robert R. Hawthon, Robt. N. Miller.

On Fruits and Vegetables—Wm. Garland, Ormsby Ilis, Jos. W. Walker, Noble Butler, T. B. Bell, Ed. Sanders, B. Wood.

On Wine—Edwin Bryant, J. J. Raffe, Jos. Barbaroux, J. F. Thompson, J. Meaks, Ed. T. Berry, Warrick Miller.

On Poultry—John Hancock, Jno. Crowley, Jr., Geo. Hall, Jr., Benningfield, Jno. Poe, Jno. T. Bate and Jno. Hart.

On Manufactures—Chas. Russel, Gen. Hamilton, Wm. Wallace, Richard W. Snowden, Wm. H. Stokes, C. L. Wheeler, and John Rhoades.

The first named in each instance to be chairman.

AN ERROR—CORN PLANTING.—It is a mistake that some agricultural journals are making to recommend early planting indiscriminately, and without noting the exceptions.

The farmer of course will think for himself—will use his agricultural paper to suggest thoughts and plans for his own acceptance or rejection, and not be governed by which he is to be led captive at another's will.

Hence, wrong advice is not in all cases very harmful. We verily believe that the worst agricultural paper that could be conducted would do some good—would be useful, in the absence of better journals, than its con—because in some way it thought—would sharpen the farmer's powers of observation and reasoning.

Still wrong advice may prove injurious to some. The young, inexperienced farmer might be misled. Take, as an instance, the indiscriminate recommendation to plant corn. It is good advice, so far as it is sound. The seed will be heavier if the seed is sown about as soon as Jack Frost lets go his hold of the ground; potatoes, taking a succession of years, advance do well with early than late planting; winter wheat is on the whole more likely to escape its enemies and mature heavily with early than with a late sowing. It is so with crops generally; and then the enterprising farmer longs to see his work done in good time—would rather drive his work than be driven by it.

But how is it with Indian corn? Does the early-planting always give the best crop? No. Planting at the right time gives the best result. And when is the right time? It is important to know, for, when that time comes, not a moment is to be lost. Corn is a tropical plant; it loves a great deal of heat and but a moderate degree of moisture; it will flourish only in tropical countries, or those which have the summer of tropical climates. Under favorable circumstances, it grows rapidly. Three months will carry it from germination (beyond the danger of injury by frost, provided the weather be warm and not over wet. Without these favoring circumstances, it "gets contrary," to to speak, and won't grow. These are essential to its tropical nature. There is hardly a more important problem for the corn grower than to fit upon the time for planting, when the seed will come in three or four days, and then grow "right on" without stopping.

Wheat, rye, oats, almost anything else, will wait for growing weather, without injury to the final result. Not so with corn. The farmer must give it the three hottest months in our climate, so nearly as his judgement will enable him.

The true advice with regard to this crop is, not to plant early; but as soon as the ground is warm and there is a reasonable hope of its continuing so, not to lose a moment.—Plow Loom, and Anvil.

EXPERIMENTS IN MANURING FOR POTATOES, &c. During the past summer I appropriated a large piece of land with the view of testing the value of certain hand manures as fertilizers in comparison with stable dung. The following is the result of some of the experiments, which were conducted under my own supervision, and can therefore be relied on as correct:

The manures used were—guano, soot, superphosphate of lime, potash, nitrate of potash, nitrate of soda, sulphate of magnesia, and stable dung; all of which were of the best quality that could be procured from town, and consequently the cost of carting, added, so that the reader may see at a glance the total cost of each, to which I solicit his most attentive consideration.

On examining the above table, it will be seen, in plot 1, what the land did produce without the assistance of manure. All the ground was in that condition previous to experimenting.

Plot 2.—The superphosphate of lime had a tendency to increase the number of potatoes, but there were more small ones in this plot than in any of the others. The only other advantage in using this manure is the improvement in the flavor of the potatoes.

In plot 3, the tubers were large and even. The soot was sown broadcast previously to flat-hoeing. The color of the foliage was changed to a beautiful dark green in a few hours after its application, doubtless owing to the ammonia contained in the soot. In all my experiments on the potato I have found soot increase the size and produce. It is a most valuable manure, and ought to be more generally used by the farmer for most of his crops, either by itself as a top-dressing or in a mixture with earth and dung, but the first is much the best way of using it. I have no doubt the value of the same kind of manure when been substituted for the superphosphate, a much heavier crop would have been the result.

Plot 4.—An improvement on plot 1.

Plot 5.—The trial of potash did not produce the result anticipated. The disease commenced early in this plot, and, aided by a dry easterly wind, the foliage was destroyed before their growth was perfected. Other circumstances induce me to think that vrair is a manure too cold and wet for the well-doing of the potato. They did not come up so soon as in the other plots, although planted at the same time.

Plot 6.—These were also longer breaking through the soil, and at the period of taking up were half of them diseased. The remainder were excellent in flavor.

Plot 7.—This crop was splendid in appearance and good in flavor. Very few small or diseased. That quantity of guano did not produce so much foliage as I expected. Possibly, it might be owing to a greater distance allowed from plant to plant, to prevent their being drawn. Indeed, when any soil is heavily manured, the distance of the plants is a point of the utmost importance. I have found with a manure like guano, also to the overlooking of this essential point may often be ascribed the failure of a crop.

Plots 8 and 9 produced a fine sample.

Plot 10 was remarkably fine and large, with very few small or diseased. The foliage kept healthy to the last. Taking all things into consideration, I have not seen the like this season.

The potatoes manured with sulphate of magnesia and nitrate of soda (about 75 lbs. of each per acre) were large and extremely white, but watery and very bad flavored. These two manures I should not recommend to be used in the cultivation of the potato. The potash and nitrate of potash, tried in different plots, produced no result worth recording. I was somewhat disappointed in this, as the tuber is a potash plant, the stem and foliage a lime plant. However, I intend experimenting with these two manures next season in another way on the same description of crop, and I trust with better success.

Nitrate of Soda on Wheat.—The nitrate of soda had an astonishing effect on the wheat plant, causing a beautiful and luxuriant blade, with large and heavy grain. The change in the color of the plant was perceptible 24 hours after the application. The quantity used was 50 lbs. per acre, without any other manure, applied in March. The cost of this manure was 2½ per cwt.

Superphosphate of Lime for Root Crops.—Although superphosphate of lime is not of slight service as a manure to the potato, such was not the case when used for the growth of the carrot. I found that 2 cwt. of superphosphate and 2 cwt. of guano per acre produced much finer roots than 4 cwt. of guano per acre, allowing manured with 15 tons of the best stable dung. Turnips also grew large and fine with a dressing of 1½ cwt. of superphosphate and 125 lbs. of guano. These two manures are quite enough for the turnip. It is better, however, to apply a larger quantity of superphosphate than of guano, as the latter has a tendency to produce too much foliage.

A piece of land situated near me was, according to my direction (it being in very poor condition) dressed with 3 cwt. per crop of superphosphate, and afterwards sown in yellow and white turnips. This has produced a crop that, for size and weight, will not be equalled in Jersey.

Mangolds—carrots, and parsnips, roots of great value to the farmer, will grow considerably larger on land manured with superphosphate and dung, than with a larger quantity of stable-dung alone; and the same remark will apply during this year on the various crops grown in a large number of fields with different manures, I am certain that superphosphate of lime, judiciously applied, exercises an important influence in the growth of these roots, and will not fail to give a satisfactory return.

How to Apply Artificial Manures.—To those unacquainted with the use of artificial, or, as they are sometimes called, concentrated manures, I say that my experience in them leads me to think the following are the best methods:

Guano—for Potatoes, in two or three applications, when the vegetation is sufficiently advanced, hoe and heel in—for Turnips, sow on broadcast and harrowed in before sowing, that the seed may not come in contract—for Wheat, plowed in; if guano is sown in March or April, it will be found to produce too much straw and light ears, but not other results—for Carrots and other root crops, well mixed with the surface when digging in.

Soot—for Potatoes, sown broadcast at the time of planting, and harrowed in; it assists in darkening the soil and produces an earlier crop.

Superphosphate of Lime—for Turnips or for Wheat, for which it is a valuable manure, should be sown in drills with the seed, but where the drill-system is not adopted, it can be sown broadcast as soon as the land is prepared for the seed, or not later—all other roots it may be used in the same way as guano. It is supposed by some that superphosphate of lime, sown in drills with the seed, gives an impetus to the young plant, that it may grow away from the ravages of the black flea (Haltica nemorum). In my experience I never found it a sufficient or even a partial benefit for the evil. Several times this summer I had large beds of turnips, and turnip seeds, manured with superphosphate of lime. That variety of seed used was at the rate of 10 lbs. to the yard. In consequence of the frequent failures, I used that quantity, thinking to have a second crop after the black flea; but no, three times I saw the beds destroyed in four hours; therefore, I question if that insect be more than can force vegetation outdoors to outgrow the ravages of this small but powerful pest.

Bonedust—for Turnips, should be harrowed in before the seed—for clover, inch-bones are preferable, plowed in when preparing the land for wheat, but very often, bonedust should be substituted and applied any time during winter and well rolled in. For any that may require more than can be had in the same way as guano, but previously to so doing it ought to be made into a compost with earth and well moistened, some months previously to using. Further, any manure having volatile salts should be applied during moist weather; otherwise, a loss of the most valuable part is the consequence.

WAY TO EXCHANGE POTATOES.—Messrs. Editors: Some time in the April last I wrote an article for the Cultivator on "Early Potatoes." Soon after it appeared, I received a letter from Gurdon Evans, Esq., of Oswego, N. Y., containing a thin paring from the end and eye of a potato, which he called "June Russett," with a request that I would send him in the same way a like piece of an "Early Carter," which I did.

Soon after the marriage of the latter, it being directed Huntington, N. H., the piece of potato, when I received it, was very much dried and shriveled, and resembled a piece of bacon rind, much more than it did a piece of potato. But I planted it, and received as a product eight good sized potatoes—the four largest weighing over one and a half pounds.

Owing to the lateness of planting, or rather the slow process of its sprouting and growth, I have no means of deciding how early the variety is; but the yield I consider very remarkable, considering the doubtful appearance of the piece I had—to say nothing of the potatoes, and find it meddling as to quality. I shall plant the remainder this spring.

I make this statement more particularly, to show with what little trouble and expense the seed of any new or valuable variety of potato, even where quite a distance intervenes.—Boston Cultivator.

SEED CORN FROM SMALL END OF EAR.—G. W. Coffin, of Duchess county, New York, after six years' careful experiment, has been compelled, against all former notions, to believe that corn for seed is best when taken from the small end of the ear. He says that with like treatment it has outyielded that from other portions of the ear in every instance where care was taken to select those that were well rounded over at the little end, the largest reaching as high in some instances as 22 bushels of ears per acre.

TAKE UP AND REPLANT.—All perennial flowering plants, roses, &c., flower much more freely and perfect, if they are taken up, their roots and tops pruned in the ground thoroughly dug, then replanted, say once in two or three years.—Ohio Farmer.

MIGNONETTE.—The common Mignonette is an annual, well known, and much prized for its fragrance and beauty in forming bouquets. It is perhaps not generally known that its fragrance is very much enhanced when grown on poor soil.—Ohio Farmer.

☞ As a general rule, we have no liking for compliments to our genius at the expense of our person, but the following poetry from our fair friend at Buffalo is very fine, and on the whole we must have been a daguerreotype, and the sun never did and never would do so half justice in painting our face. We do not know how to account for it except upon the supposition that the fiery old fellow is jealous of us. We have done everything in reason to mollify him, but he is inexorable. Indeed, we don't think him much of an artist anyhow. We hope our artists will soon find out how to have daguerreotyping done by the moonbeams, and then no doubt full justice will be done us. We used to flatter the sweet moon with so many sonnets when we were a boy that she may even feel disposed to flatter us a little in our maturer years—unless the spiteful sun shall refuse to lend her his light for the occasion:

TO A PICTURE OF GEO. D. PRENTICE.

I had a dream, a poet's dream, for I was wide awake,
And many quaint and wishing forms such truant fancies take,
And mine—it was of one I know, only as spirits know,
And eagerly through all the past—through all the long ago,
My thoughts went back and searchingly to gather memories owned.
Of all the pure and beautiful a mortal's eye may meet;
And, when I'd found them all in one, the earnest, holy, true,
I called it by the earthly name the thoughtless give to you.
I drew round the glory of your head such as angels wear,
I dreamed a wondrous radiance was on your wavy hair,
I dreamed the stars in liquid light were sleeping in your eyes,
I gave the genius of your soul had come from far off skies,
And as the picture in my heart grew real day by day,
Until the sunbeams painted one which faded many a way.

How like a fretted child I grieved to find its beauty fled!
I wept to think the vision o'er and ashes in its stead;
How mournfully the picture passed that I had loved so long,
But in its place the genius lived—the sweetness of its song.
And now, a face where loveliness had never carved a line,
Was gazing upward earnestly to see itself in mine.
I asked the object, pictured life, why beauty died apart,
Why fair of face, and great of thought, ne'er claimed the self-same heart,
And slowly, softly came a voice, a mellow silver tone,
Which charmed the sadly listening ear with music all its own.
I said, "why dwells the richest pearls in ocean's rudest shell?
Why do the glowing gems of light within a darkened cell,
Where bud, or blossom, dew, or star, or even human eyes
Can't see the shrine, guess of the light which dazzles all the skies?"
And slowly, softly came a voice, a mellow silver tone,
Which charmed the sadly listening ear with music all its own.
I said, "why dwells the richest pearls in ocean's rudest shell?
Why do the glowing gems of light within a darkened cell,
Where bud, or blossom, dew, or star, or even human eyes
Can't see the shrine, guess of the light which dazzles all the skies?"
Then will not genius dwell in one, the largest, like a soul
Of which the rest are but a part, a portion or a whole?
Then will not genius dwell in one, the largest, like a soul
Of which the rest are but a part, a portion or a whole?
Then will not genius dwell in one, the largest, like a soul
Of which the rest are but a part, a portion or a whole?

☞ Here is a most exquisite tribute to Thalberg from the young enchantress, who is in Poetry what Thalberg is in music:

[For the Louisville Journal.]

SIGISMUND THALBERG.

Across thy numbers, pale and faint,
My charmed soul doth lean and paint,
Thrilled with thy soul's high, jubilant,

Immortal tones! A tender pain,
Thy glorious heart dissolved to rain,
Flows softly in upon my brain,

Till o'er the farthest shadowy rim
Of earth my soul doth reel and swim
Into the sphere of seraphim!

I weep the silver-ringing lyre
With poet-eyes and hands of fire,
Yearning to win thy meaning higher.

But ever, evermore doth fail
Across my spirit like a pall
The sorrow in thy madrigal—

The wailing trouble of a wrong,
A human wo disguised long,
A mighty passion deep and strong!

And still there lingers in thy lay
A glory, like a dying day—
A fragrance of departed May!

A part of the high gift sublime
That taught Homeric bards to rhyme
The thunders of their glorious time!

And ever shall thy radiant name,
Blent with their old heroic fame,
Burn heavens and in one quenchless flame.

Thou art Titanic in thy might
To sweep the golden chords of light,
Thrilling them with the infinite

Of subtlest passion, wild expressed
In harsh and calm of love's unrest,
Before the ideal world confessed

And beautiful! Thou stand'st serene,
Lifting thy spirit to the mien
Of Godhood, won from the unseen!

THE DYING HUSBAND.

BY ANNA MARIA WELBY.

Then will miss me, dearest, often,
When away from thee I'm laid,
And thine eye at thought will soften
Of the lonely grass-bound shade:
And a voice the sleepless watches
Of thy widowed nights shall fill,
Even while thine ear it catches,
Undermeath the moon, still.

Though no more this bosom aching
Pillowed on thy heart may be,
Ever thy first thought, on waking,
Sweetest, will be one of me—
E'en the many blooms, from slumber,
That my kisses woke not more,
O'er and o'er again thou'lt number,
Wishing thou hadst not been born!

And beside the board while sitting,
From the household glances all,
When thine eye is meeting, fainting,
On my vacant place shall fall,
Then I know thy voice will falter,
And thine anguish forth would break—
But with grief thou must not alter
Striving, for the children's sake.

But when all around thee's lonely,
When the sunshine and the flower
In thy home but leave thee only,
Though the dreary moonlight hour—
While thy busy needle pining
For the thoughtless ones at play,
'Tween each dainty stitch and fining
Tearful down thy cheeks shall stray,

And when twilight shadows cluster
Round the door, on the latch,
Where so oft the young moon's lustre
On the face of hope hath shone,
Then thy thoughts will vagely wander—
Knowing that I'm not there—
Save that in the churchyard yonder
Sleeps the husband of thy youth.

And around the hearth when meeting,
In the dim and solemn night,
When no more my voice's greeting
Enters with the tear's flight,
Where the children sit in gladness—
Then God help thee and sustain!
For, too young to know my sadness,
They may deepen, thus, thy pain.

Weary years, before thee stretching,
I have pictured to my mind;
May the future of my pitching
Be not that for thee designed!
Yet though years may then have fleeted,
And the many count thy smile,
From the path before thee, duteous,
Shall no living one beguile.

For his sake that here hath striven,
For thy sake, all else above,
Then as ill-love for hatred,
Those I leave thee of aurlore;
And, oh, think thee oft a'hile leading,
It will soothe thee, such command,
That my soul for thee is pleading,
Even there, at God's right hand!

Teach them, darling, night and morning,
As they love their father's name,
All his utter hate and scorning
Of the thinks that years ago
Teach them, too, thy angel meekness
And thy charity to all,
Who are we that in our weakness
God's own judgment would forestall!

Tell them, early, of the trials
That youth's promises may blight,
Of the thousand self-denials
They must practice for the right;
Up the fallic's sure plank walking,
Bridge connecting earth and sky,
All of human heart's sustaining
That would refuge seek on high.

And may he, of all our treasures,
Be what I have been to thee,
Whom I solemnly and truly
Leave thee, dearest, to think most like me;
Though he seem less fair to others
And more warped than he be
Closer than his fair-haired brothers
Thou wilt clasp him to thy breast.

And nine own sweet, dainty daughter—
Playful round thee as the wind—
Scarce the winsome words I taught her
Can her baby-lips find;
Oh, the little blue-eyed fairy!
With her mother's brow and cheek—
Let her go—forget me, Mary,
When I'm gone from you and thee!

Lay thy pale face on my shoulder,
Round my neck thy fond arms fling—
'Tis the last time I shall fold her
To my heart, poor blighted thing!
Oh, forget me, Mary, darling,
Who hath fathomed all our woe,
That where souls celestial gather
With such stricken heart I go!

MEMORY'S DEAREST PICTURE.

BY MRS. J. A. BEATTIE.

As the wind with mystic minde sadly mutters by the door,
And, like spirits from rosy dream-land, shadows dance upon the floor,
I am sitting in the silence, dreaming of the "long ago,"
Listning to its witching music in the heart's recesses low,
Led by Memory, I wander back through long departed years,
Till my eyes grow dim and heavy with their weight of unwept tears.

For there is a mournful glory, like a rainbow in the sky,
In the pleasant recollection of the olden days gone by.
Childhood's hopes of blissful dreamings, free from sorrow, pain and care,
Seem to me like sunny islands in the stormy sea of life;
Gilds their memories before me like the shadows o'er a knife.

Like the heart-entrancing fancies of a pleasant summer's dream,
With a indolence step I wander through the dim halls of the Past,
And my path may seems to glitten with the memories round it cast.
Now I gaze upon the picture hanging on the dim, old wall,
Where the light of days departed with a mournful glory falls,
There's one so meek and holy that my language is too faint
Half to beauty, half its glory, half its lovelinese to paint;
'Tis the picture of my sister—farther on she could not be,
So she faltered by the wayside, and the angels took her home!

Often now her voice seems calling from that dim and distant shore,
And methinks I hear an angel softly trading heaven's high lore.

RUSSELLVILLE, KY.

WHEAT CROP.—The Bellville (Ill.) Tribune, of the 27th, says:

We have made it our business to inquire of farmers from different localities in the county in relation to the prospects for wheat the approaching harvest, and, from all the information we can gather, there will not be anything like an average yield. The drilled wheat is an exception, and is said to look well, promising an abundant crop. Wheat that was sown broadcast, late in the season, in many instances will be a total failure.

WASHINGTON, April 1.

The Departments are besieged by hundreds of applicants who are anticipating extesive changes in the clerical forces, but none have yet been made. Sixty such applicants arrived this morning and are registered at the Union.

Governor Walker had another interview with the Cabinet this morning on Kansas affairs.

Sampson W. Harris, ex-member of Congress from Alabama, was drowned in the lake since the adjournment of Congress, died here to-day of pneumonia.

Moses McDonald has been appointed Collector, and Stephen Jordan Postmaster, at Portland, for the latter vice Woodbury, whose commission had expired.

Leonard Jones has been postmaster at Bangor, Maine, vice Haines, whose commission will soon expire.

The President has made the following Kansas appointments:

John W. Whitfield, ex-Delegate from Kansas, Register, and Daniel Woodson, ex-Secretary of State of Kansas, Receiver of the Delaware District.

Frederick Emory, Register, and Samuel J. Dawner, Receiver, for the Western Land District.

Wm. II. Doah, Register, and Epaphroditus Ransom, of Michigan, Receiver of the Osage Land District.

G. W. Mannypenny has resigned the Commissionership of Indian Affairs, and Charles E. Mix, chief clerk of that bureau, has been appointed Commissioner ad interim.

The administration has initiated no mode of proceeding in Kansas, having in view the election of delegates preliminary to the formation of a State constitution; but, with the intention and desire to terminate the distracting question of slavery, will assist in carrying forward the measure which has been consummated by the people of that territory; leaving the people at large, without any reference whatever to their political divisions, to settle it by a free and untrammeled vote for themselves.

If having been repeatedly asked how independent suffrage can be exercised, if the laws of the territory are to be regarded as valid? the reply, from the best sources of information, is that the law providing for the census of that people explicitly declaring that all free white citizens of the United States over twenty-one years of age, resident in the territory on the first of April, shall be entitled to vote for delegates to the constitutional convention.

This is to be administered without any regard whatever to any test oaths. Gov. Walker and Secretary Stauton have repeatedly said that their efforts (in accordance with the views of the Administration) will be to secure a fair expression of opinion of the people of Kansas, while they will carefully abstain from any act that may be construed into partiality by one side or the other. Whichever way the citizens may decide, the Administration will be content. Walker repeats his opinion that Kansas will be a free State.

MESSRS. EDITORS: Having been afflicted with fistula which was operated upon twice with the knife without benefit, and during a period of twelve years it assumed its worst possible form, and, being greatly emaciated and scarcely able to walk, was regarded by physicians and all who knew me as helpless. But Dr. Hulse has cured me sound and restored my general health.

I feel it a duty to say to physicians and the afflicted that Dr. Hulse is a learned and scientific man, possessing ability to cure fistula in a superior, safe, mild, positively certain, and permanent manner, without knife or caustic; and no man living is more candid or certain to cure all forms of chronic diseases of every name where he promises a cure.

Seven patients cured by him—four of fistula and three of cancer—go home this week.

Much of Dr. H.'s success doubtless depends upon his varied and extensive experience.

Dr. H.'s medicine is pleasant, always building the patient up and removing disease from the system.

P. S. A large number, after suffering all the horrors of the knife or caustic, loss of time and money, abandon the physician who deceived them and go to Dr. Hulse and are cured.

Address Dr. H., box 411. Office on Fifth, between Market and Main. J. T. BRYAN, M. D.

Dr. J. T. Bryan is entitled to full confidence. His case and cure by Dr. Hulse are known to me. I also know Dr. Hulse to be a gentleman worthy of all confidence of extensive scientific attainments; possessing remarkable candor and skill in the treatment of chronic diseases.

Mrs. Settle was treated by several eminent physicians in Louisville of complicated dyspepsia and disease of the bowels; and, after her case was considered hopeless, Dr. Hulse cured her seven years since. She remains well. The editor of this paper will answer inquiries. C. SETTLE.
